Coolidge, He Knows

The Dole Bogey

Russia and Religion

By Arthur Brisbane

SOME TIME AGO on the Mayflower, with President Coolidge, Secretary Kellogg, General Pershing and your narrator on board, someone quoted George Harvey's suggestion that President Coolidge send a commission to London to "discuss Europe's debt to us." Calvin Coolidge looked up from his plate and settled the question.

"They came here to borrow the money," said he, "why can't they come here to talk about it?"

Once more, in his article published yesterday in the Chicago Herald and Examiner and many other newspapers, Calvin Coolidge "talked sense" concerning foreign debts.

If you haven't already read what he said, read it now:

"What is involved in the argument that the (European) debts should be cancelled to increase trade? Fundamentally, this means the most enormous subsidy to foreign commerce that was ever proposed. This has a strange sound in the vocabulary of those who advocate that trade should be free and unrestricted. We would be involved in subsidizing the trade of foreign people out of money collected from our own people.

"If this policy is to be adopted, if our taxpayers are to be paying the taxes of foreign people supposedly in order to increase their power to trade with us, there is no reason to limit the process to those who happen to owe our government.

"The principle would require a broader application. It would be logical to select all countries where an argument could be made that if our Treasury would bear a part of their tax burden they might enlarge their commerce with us.

"If we adopted this principle, logically, we should open our Treasury to all the world."

If you know President Coolidge, your imagination can see the expression in his gray New England eye as he wrote those words. Every American ought to remember them, and remember that the Treasury of the United States is an American institution, not an international "relief" organization.

Many individual Americans would welcome cancellation of their debts to brokers, banks, stores, mortgage lenders, as a step toward prosperity. But that isn't done.

Our European friends should read again President Hoover's statement that the world's expense preparing for war is five and a half billion dollars every year. If Europe would resolve to stop international murder and discontinue her war expenses, she would save in three years more than she owes us.

Great Britain is worried, "staggered," by the cost of the dole. It runs up now to $500,000,000 of our money a year. That is too much if spent unnecessarily. But it is a small sum if the spending prevents serious revolution.

England preferred sending money to the continent, financing the fights of others in Napoleon's time, to going over and fighting on her own account. When the peace was ripe for picking, she went over and picked it at Waterloo.

With the question of unemployment dangerous in Great Britain, that rich country prefers to spend half a billion feeding the people rather than pay the cost of a revolution.

As it is, having the Labor party in power is revolution enough, for the Tories. And if a country can afford twenty billions for an external war, it can afford some money to prevent dangerous dissatisfaction at home.

We may come to realize that even in this blessed land, we can't solve a great problem by handing money to Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, or Salvation Army, with a request to hand "whatever is left after the overhead" to the needy.

Walter Duranty says Bolshevism is "a new and excessively militant religion." Mrs. Clarence Vaughn, on the contrary, says the Russians have abolished God and offer no substitute for God. She says:

"They have tried to destroy spiritual hope as they have destroyed earthly hope." Also she says: "Russia is the most immoral country I ever entered, and I have been through most European countries."

The lady, whose portrait looks highly intelligent, must have seen a great deal in a short time.

One thing is sure, giving up the outward forms of religion is dangerous, if you want religion to continue as an important institution.

Samuel Johnson, who knew it, said in his "Life of Milton":

"To be of no church is dangerous. Religion, of which the

GIRL TRAPPED 2-GUN CROWLEY

New York, May 8—The fastest indictment for first degree murder ever returned in Nassau county—26 minutes from the time the grand jury convened until the true bill was voted—named Francis (Two Gun) Crowley today as the killer of Patrolman Frederick Hirsch on Long Island last Monday.

Crowley, thin, wan and sometimes called "Snorty," was captured late yesterday when 200 policemen with guns, axes and bombs trapped him, his girl companion, Helen Walsh, and Rudolph (Tough Red) Duringer in a West 90th st. apartment.

Rudolph Duringer was indicted by the Bronx grand jury for the murder of Virginia Brannen, Bangor, Me., taxi-dancer.

EMPLOYES HALT GRAIN BLAZE

More than 200 feet above the ground, two employes of the Whittemore Grain Co. fought a blaze in the grain elevator at the plant in Harrison st., Roslindale, today, their work saving the structure from serious damage.

The elevator is valued at $75,000, but damage to both stock and structure would not reach more than $5000 through the work of William Sullivan and Harry Smith, the employes, fire officials said.

Firemen, called on two alarms, were forced to raise huge extension ladders on the outside of the structure while others relieved Sullivan and Smith, who had been working with small hoses.

The two had climbed an inside stairway through dense smoke to get at the blaze.

Sparks from the elevator blaze dropped on the roofs of a garage and repair shop and a barn, but firemen quickly extinguished them without any material damage. The cause was not immediately determined.

Confessed Grafter Starts Sentence of Two Years at Deer Island

The former "czar" of the Boston police department went into exile on Deer island today.

Oliver B. Garrett, who yesterday confessed he had been a grafting "cop," began his two-year sentence in the House of Correction.

He went to jail laughing, handcuffed to a thief.

"Don't worry, boy, I'll have a good time," he called to a well-wisher at Eastern ave. wharf before the island boat sailed.

As an extortion conspirator and an accepter of gratuities while a policeman—and perhaps as a former milkman and dairy expert—he was due for assignment to duties in the island cowbarn before nightfall.

Dapper, and blithe, and wisecracking, glad it was all over, the one-time liquor squad dictator, whom the county twice failed to convict on charges to which he yesterday pleaded guilty, went to serve his sentence.

SHOUT "SO LONG, OLLIE!"

At Charles st. jail, where he has been held during two trials since last December, he was given a rousing sendoff by other inmates.

"So long, Ollie!" was the cry in the yard, as he stepped into the van that carried him to the Deer Island steamer.

During the morning he had said his goodbye. He had kissed his sobbing wife and shaken hands with Lillian V. Hatch, co-defendant with him on a conspiracy charge

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American

A poison pen plot, aimed at a member of the old Russian nobility, a Harvard Law School instructor, has shaken the age-old conservative traditions of the school to its foundations, the Boston Evening American exclusively learned today.

The letters, sent to Dean Roscoe Pound and others accusing Timothy A. Taracouzio, former captain of aviation in the Russian imperial army, of romances with a college girl, a professor's daughter and society girls of Cambridge and Boston.

In his defense Taracouzio blames another faculty member for the letters, denies all the accusations and declares he had to defend himself from this other man at a university party at which vodka was drunk.

STATE BATTLES HATHAWAY'S MOVE FOR CHANGE OF VENUE

OPPOSITION BY M'LYMAN IS EXPECTED

Attorney-General to Also Protest Defense Move to Examine Witnesses

Providence, May 8—Vigorous opposition to the motion for change of venue in the trial of Elliott R. Hathaway, accused slayer of Verna E. Russell, student nurse, will be made by Atty. Gen. Benjamin McLyman on May 13, the date set for arguments on the eight motions filed by Hathaway's counsel.

The venue motion, regarded as the most important filed, seeks to move the scene of action from Newport County on the ground that the apparent hostility to Hathaway in that section endangers the fairness of the coming trial.

Another motion which will be attacked by McLyman is that which seeks to invoke an old Rhode Island law allowing the defense the right to examine all government witnesses prior to the trial.

INVOKES OLD LAW

The old law, it is pointed out, was cited principally in civil cases, and the oldest attaches of Superior Court here have no recollection of its use in criminal cases.

McLyman stated today that Newport County is the proper setting for the trial and that he had prepared a number of arguments to support his contention. The decision will rest upon Judge Charles C. Walsh, who will preside at the motions session and who is also likely to sit at the trial.

AWAITS MAGRATH REPORT

The report of Dr. George Burgess Magrath on the pathological aspects of the case is eagerly awaited by Atty.-Gen. McLyman. On the findings of the Boston expert, Rhode Island hopes to base its strongest evidence against Hathaway.

Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley of Bristol county may receive the report today and has agreed to furnish McLyman with a copy.

Observance of Arbor Day in Rhode Island prevented examination today of the list of motions filed by Hathaway's counsel. They will be opened in the office of the clerk of Superior court tomorrow.

CAROL WED? NO, SAYS MARIE

Nice, France, May 8 (INS)—The Dowager Queen Marie, "queen mother-in-law of the Balkans," today issued a formal statement on the matrimonial affairs of two of the children, King Carol II of Rumania and Princess Ileana, which have gained wide public notice.

The Dowager Queen declared Carol has no matrimonial ties, since Princess Helene is legally divorced from him, but she denied emphatically Carol would contract a morganatic marriage with Mme. Magda Lupescu, as has been reported.

Princess Ileana's engagement to Archduke Anton of Austria was characterized by Queen Marie as a "case of love at first sight." The date of the wedding, she said, depends entirely upon the decision of King Carol, although June 1 has been mentioned tentatively.

rewards are distant, and which is animated only by faith and hope, will glide by degrees out of the mind unless it be invigorated and re-impressed by external ordinances, by stated calls to worship, and the salutary influence of example."

Mrs. Warren also says:

"There is no laughter left in Russia and nobody smiles. All know that the people were far happier under the Czar, but none dares to say so. Those who do, die."

A terrible condition, which proves that photography is not accurate.

American reporters traveling through Russia with cameras show you photographs of Russian woman working with the men, smiling broadly, amazingly powerful. They bring back, also, photographs of young people apparently enjoying themselves. Perhaps it is all hypocrisy.

Strangely, concerning the charge of "slavery in Russian lumber camps," one of the biggest lumber men in this country, head of an old-established business, said to this writer last Sunday:

"We have reason to think that conditions in Russian lumber camps are on the average better than in the United States. In any case, workers in our lumber camps earn just enough to live and go on working, so what talk about slavery is rubbish aimless."

And They Said It Couldn't Be Done

Decency has won a great victory in Massachusetts.

Oliver B. Garrett is serving time.

They said it couldn't be done.

Yet there he is today, a prisoner. By his own plea of guilty.

It has taken this great commonwealth more than a year to get him into his proper and natural environment, a prison.

But get him there it did, and the result is worth every dollar it has cost.

The public officer who betrayed his trust, the raider who violated every rule of order and decency in levying his tribute, the trafficker in the horrid spoils of dealings in women has at last come to judgment.

Backing him have been the hitherto powerful forces of the underworld. Pressure upon officials engaged in the effort to punish him has been continuous.

Fear that Garrett might tell what he knew about the liquor and vice business in Boston and thereby involve those higherups who have reaped the real harvest of dirty dollars brought about this pressure.

He made his bargain. He kept silent. He has protected those hidden partners, large and small, who sought to protect him. He is entitled to no pity. His admission of full personal guilt does not absolve him from telling the truth, and all the truth, about his operations. Until such time as he bares the names of those engaged in his rotten business with him, until he tells who his protectors have been, until he reveals who covered his flight from trial last fall, and until he bares the deal by which he sneeringly surrendered for his day at the bar, he need expect nothing but loathing and contempt from every decent citizen.

To District Attorney William J. Foley the Evening American extends its thanks and congratulations, and those of the community. Had it not been for this official's courage and determination, and the loyal assistance of his aides, headed by Frederick T. Doyle, it can be presumed that Garrett would be still scoffing at the law and continuing his career of reckless criminality. Mr. Foley has done a good job. Let that fact not be forgotten.

The Evening American convinced itself more than a year ago that Garrett was guilty and constituted a menace to the community. This newspaper also was convinced that he represented an element so bloated with loot, so confident of its ability to escape any and all punishment, that it must be taught a summary lesson if law and order were to have any standing whatsoever.

This newspaper, therefore, has done what it could to bring about the breaking up of this vicious and untamed ring. It offered a $5000 reward for information, at the time of the preliminary investigation of the ring's activities. It offered a reward of $5000 for the capture of the man after he fled the fate he knew awaited him. Members of the staff were only hours behind him at certain periods during his flight.

Garrett, the little grafter, meant little. As the agent of a vicious ring he meant everything. Therefore, the Evening American has continuously insisted he must be tried and, if guilty, put in prison.

He is in prison. His political friends and associates have been shown that Justice still has a home in Boston.

Justice will not be completely satisfied until these so-called higher-ups join their tool and associate in prison.

Retribution may be waiting for them just around the corner.

$200,000 FIRE AT FAIRFIELD

Fairfield, Me., May 8 (AP)—Fire, believed to have been started by spontaneous combustion in oil waste, today destroyed four buildings of the New England Waste Process Corp. here with a loss estimated at $200,000.

Fifteen men and women made their way out of the three storehouses and one office building without difficulty.

Low water pressure hampered the Fairfield firemen. A pumper was brought from Waterville to draw water from the Kennebec river, but the delay permitted the fire to gain such headway it could not be checked.

Patsy Cutsall, 15, of 126 Riverside Drive, New York city, may only be 15, but she thinks she is able to choose her boy friends without her mother's aid. At least, so she told Patrolman Patrick McDonald in Park sq. early today.

Officer McDonald noticed Patsy walking around aimlessly and questioned her. It developed that Patsy was in love and her mother disapproved of the boy, so Patsy decided to run away to Boston.

McDonald took her to police headquarters and her parents were notified. She was taken to the House of Detention, charged with being a runaway.

ECKENER SEES LITTLE PERIL TO ZEPPELIN

Replying to Sverdrupp, Says He Considers Trip to the North Pole Is Safe

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
(Universal Service Special Cable)

Berlin, May 8—Criticism of the flight of the Graf Zeppelin to meet Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine Nautilus at or near the North Pole, made by Prof. Sverdrupp, Norwegian Arctic expert, met with a definite statement by Dr. Hugo Eckener that unless he considered the amazing project safe he would not attempt it.

In a statement distributed by a semi-official Norwegian news agency, Dr. Sverdrupp is quoted as having said that the danger of ice forming on the Graf Zeppelin imperils not only the crew but the distinguished list of scientists and also Lady Drummond Hay, the only woman to be aboard.

PREDICTS AID TO SCIENCE

On learning of the Norwegian expert's criticism, Dr. Eckener stated:

"The danger of ice forming on the airship and imperilling the Graf has been given most careful thought and study.

"Not only in my opinion but in that of others who know the Arctic from personal experience, this danger is not great in July and can be avoided or prevented by proper navigation of the Zeppelin."

Nor does Dr. Eckener agree with the Norwegian scientist that the flight can have no scientific value. Dr. Eckener said that aside from trying to communicate with and meet the Nautilus, the Graf will undertake an aerial survey and exploration north of Franz Josef Land. He said:

"Both Nautilus and Graf, besides being equipped with wireless, will have wireless telephone apparatus. The operation of the wireless telephone in the little known Polar regions, where still less is known of magnetic disturbances, I submit has a definite value to science.

SEES LITTLE DANGER

"Too, we believe we can overcome the danger of ice forming on the airship by navigation counteracting the narrow range of degrees in which such ice coatings form. It has been scientifically calculated that there will have to be 20 tons of ice on the Graf even before we shall have to drop ballast, of which we will carry about eight tons.

"All Arctic explorations, with the exception of those of Sir Hubert Wilkins and Rear Admiral Byrd, have been on the ice, with little opportunity to study the temperature and the higher atmospheric conditions.

"It must be obvious that I shall not knowingly imperil my ship or the lives of those aboard."

JOB PROBLEM TO EDUCATORS

Washington, May 8 (AP)—Dr. Charles Riborg Mann, director of the American Council of Education, today asked these educators whether industry or government should "be held responsible for giving every worker the chance to earn an honest livelihood."

Addressing the annual meeting of the council, Mann discussed education in relation to unemployment as one of the "critical questions" to be faced.

"The present serious unemployment situation has given impetus to propaganda for more vocational schools that train men and women in the specific skills required for present industrial jobs," Mann said.

"Will the public school serve the nation best by liberating all the constructive talents of all the people, or by training them to meet the specific requirements of present industrial jobs?

"Which system or what combination of them gives every individual his utmost chance to live a creative life?

"Schools," he observed, "can certainly do more than they are doing to liberate science and technology from bondage to the dollar in the minds of the coming generation."

The director reported a grant of $500,000 from the General Education Board for a 10-year program of experiment with achievement tests.

Mother's Day May Be a 'Jag,' But Listen to News About Father

Atlantic City, May 8 (AP)—Fathers of the future will be taught to wash babies and put them to bed, Miss Anita Jones, national field representative of the Maternity Center Association, today told the annual convention of the New Jersey Hospital Association.

And fathers must be taught to go to a doctor instead of asking the next door neighbor what to do when their wives need attention, she declared.

"Mother's Day," she said, "has become an emotional jag. We go to church, shed a tear, eat a big dinner and forget about it."

"Which system or what combination of them gives every individual his utmost chance to live a creative life?

"Schools," he observed, "can certainly do more than they are doing to liberate science and technology from bondage to the dollar in the minds of the coming generation."

The director reported a grant of $500,000 from the General Education Board for a 10-year program of experiment with achievement tests.

SKELETON MAY BE KAUFMAN

Quebec, May 8 (INS)—The reported discovery in a forest near Les Frontieres of two skeletons today caused a rumor to circulate that the bones were those of Mitchell B. Kaufman of Boston, who disappeared in the Maine woods last year.

A $10,000 reward for the recovery of the millionaire's body was offered.

Authorities here expressed the opinion the bones were those of cousins named Cameron, who have been missing since they set out on a hunting expedition three years ago.

Sheriff Elmon L. Markham at Skowhegan, Me., said today that he had given "no thought" to the possibility of one of the skeletons being that of Kaufman. He said he was told the Quebec authorities believed they were the remains of two Canadians who disappeared three years ago.

Albert Wechsler, brother-in-law of Mitchell B. Kaufman, expressed doubt today that either of the skeletons found near Quebec could be the remains of Kaufman.

Wechsler said the distance of nearly 100 miles from Crocker pond seemed too great for the missing man have made his way there.

GOODBYES TO "OLLIE" ARE SAID
MISS LILLIAN V. HATCH MRS. OLIVER B. GARRETT
Mrs. Oliver B. Garrett, wife of the convicted former liquor raider, and Miss Lillian V. Hatch, co-defendants in the extortion trial, leaving Charles st. jail with heads bowed down after bidding goodbye to Garrett before he started for Deer Island. In the bundles they are carrying Garrett's belongings.

American's $5000 Reward Would Put the Thumb of Law on These Men:

GROUP whose collections must have made Garrett's $122,000 look like pin money.

RING of higher-ups who are the real powers in the graft system.

LAWYERS who are reported as furnishing protection for vice and corruption.

TIP OFF MEN who knew of raids in advance and warned proprietors of resorts paying for protection.

POLITICIANS who have been able to prevent prosecution of guilty officials and exposes of grafting.

FIXERS who have been able to so manipulate juries as to keep favored ones out of jail.

FINALLY, the men who are the real powers behind the scenes—the key men to the whole situation.

$5000 Reward

The Boston Evening American will pay a reward of $5000 for information furnished FIRST and EXCLUSIVELY to this paper resulting in the capture of Oliver B. Garrett as a fugitive from justice. All communications concerning such information should be addressed to the Garrett Reward Editor, Boston Evening American, 8 Winthrop sq., or telephone Liberty 4000. All communications and information received by this newspaper will be treated with strict confidence.

Oliver B. Garrett

Aged 35, height 5 feet 10, 160 pounds, complexion medium, eyes and hair chestnut, slightly bald in front, slender build, usually wears a double-breasted suit with coat open, neat dresser, walks jauntily.

The Garrett Case

Should Be Investigated Without Prejudice, IN FAIRNESS TO THE OFFICER AND HIS SUPERIORS

SENATOR MULHERN'S order for an investigation of the Patrolman Garrett case by a special committee of the Legislature should be adopted at once.

Garrett is entitled to a unanimous verdict of twelve jurors. So are the people of Boston. Mr. Foley says the trio will be tried again at once. The public commends this attitude, and hopes that as many trials will be had as are necessary to bring about a unanimous verdict, one way or the other.

FAIRNESS TO ALL
The central figure in the Garrett case. The Boston Evening American editorially insisted that the former liquor raider be given as many trials as necessary to bring a unanimous verdict on his innocence or guilt. (Staff photos.)

Public Says "Get 'Em"

THE measure of any activity is public opinion—and public opinion has overwhelmingly endorsed the move of the Boston Evening American in offering a reward of $5000 for the key to the graft and corruption system in Boston.

Not since the famous extortion cases nearly a decade ago has [illegible] been so shaken by revelations of misused power, of [illegible] protected law

Public Backs Mr. Foley in Fight to Jail Garrett

District Attorney's Opportunity to Win Approval

Boston has every reason to be pleased with the attitude of District Attorney William J. Foley in taking up the final stages of the Garrett case.

Mr. Foley is showing

A CALL FOR JUSTICE
Completely mirroring the sentiment of the public, the Boston Evening American demanded at the outset of the now famous Garrett case that the facts be brought to light, regardless of whom they affected. The Boston American's demands were backed by a reward of $5000 for information that would "put the thumb of the law" on the offenders.

OLLIE OF OLD
Throughout his two trials and the preceding inquiry before the attorney-general, Oliver B. Garrett maintained a jaunty air of confidence. He lost that yesterday.

REWARD SPURRED SEARCH
When Garrett defaulted and vanished before the opening of his first trial, the Boston Evening American again took the initiative by posting a reward of $5000 for information leading to his capture.

JUDGE DEFIED IN WEDDING

How 16-year-old Dorothy Plasse, alias Monroe, of Franklin st., Brockton, defied the instruction of Judge Timothy J. Ahearn of the Roxbury court and was hastily married to Julius Roposa of the Philippines to avoid prosecution was related to Commissioner Janey in federal court.

According to assistant U. S. Attorney John W. Schenck the girl and Roposa were arrested 11 days ago in a house in Astor st., Back Bay, on a serious charge. During the arraignment in the Roxbury court, Judge Ahearn, according to Prosecutor Schenck, advised the girl not to marry Roposa.

Schenck said that the recent case of Harry Malaga, who came to Boston with a girl and married her to keep her from testifying against him was similar to the present case.

"This did not save Malaga," said Schenck. "Neither will the marriage ceremony in the present case thwart the government."

Bail of $5000 was imposed for Roposa and $2500 for the girl, in default of which they were each remanded to the East Cambridge jail for a hearing May 15.

BOSTON TO GET 20 DRY AGENTS

Washington, May 8 (AP)—The prohibition bureau announced today that 200 of the 500 additional agents authorized by Congress at its last session already have been appointed.

The largest reinforcements have been assigned to the New York, Chicago and Philadelphia areas. The remainder of the 500 will be mobilized after July 1.

All districts have received a share of the additional force, although New York with 36 and Chicago with 42 head the list.

The tentative distribution of the 500 agents includes 20 for Boston.

"I haven't been notified that I am to get 20 new agents," said Prohibition Administrator Rew, Jonathan S. Lewis of the New England area today, when dispatches from Washington were called to his attention.

"If I do get 20 more agents they will be distributed throughout New England, after being given a two weeks' intensive training in a school of instruction.

"I could use 20 more agents easily and would be glad to get them."

SCIENTIST SEES 'BIGGER WORLD'

Pasadena, Cal., May 8 (AP)—Two mighty huntsmen of the universe, whose scientific sport has been tracking the cosmic ray, came together today at a physics club meeting to swap tales of their pursuit.

They are Sir James Hopewell Jeans, famous British astronomer, and Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted American physicist and Nobel prize winner. The Briton is convinced that the universe is destructively speeding to its annihilation. The American feels that it is just building up to a bigger and better future.

Both agree that the cosmic rays come from the distant skies beyond our own island universe, the milky way.

DO-X FLIES TO BRAZIL TODAY

Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, May 8 (AP)—The big German seaplane DO-X, which taxied across the Jeba Delta yesterday to Bubaque Island, was prepared to take off for South America today.

She came here last Sunday from Rio de Oro, whence she had flown from Las Palmas in the Canary Islands.

Her objective is Natal, Brazil, the sage goal attained by Italo Balbo's Italian air fleet, which started the Atlantic flight from here.

Ex-Soldier Battles to Prove He's Alive

St. Joseph, Mo., May 8 (AP)—Arnold Godbey has appeared here to refute a legal decree that he is dead, blaming the French Foreign Legion, a Riff bayonet and a camel stampede for his lengthy absence from home. Godbey said he was wounded and trampled in an engagement in the French Sudan in 1926, but recovered in a French hospital.

Testimony of his mother, Mrs. Grace Godbey Mulkey, that she had not heard from him for many months caused him to be declared legally dead a year ago.

Body in River Identified

Springfield, May 8 (AP)—The body of a man found in the Chicopee river at Ludlow last night was identified today as that of William Shapiro, 30, of this city, an inmate of the Springfield City Hospital, who disappeared April 18.

40 at Cornell Plead for German Soldier

Ithaca, N. Y., May 8 (AP)—A petition signed by 40 students, urging that the name of Hans Wagner, German soldier, be added to the list of 264 other sons of Cornell on the university's $600,000 memorial to its World War dead, today was in the hands of the chairman of the memorial funds committee.

Dr. Livingston Farrand, president of the university, after a conference yesterday with Robert E. Treman, the committee chairman, declined to announce any change in the original plans.

CLARA BOW IS RECOVERING

Hollywood, May 8 (US)—Clara Bow, red-haired "it girl" of the films, today was reported resting comfortably in the Glendale sanitarium, where she was taken after her collapse during rehearsal. Last night was one of peaceful rest for the actress. It is reported that she is allowed only a liquid diet.

Miss Bow is beginning to show signs of improvement. On her third night in the sanitarium, the actress slept about nine hours.

Drs. Hommel and Parkin, attending Miss Bow, say she suffered a complete emotional and nervous collapse after a "poison pen" attack by Frederick Girnau in his tabloid, "Coast Reporter." Girnau is under indictment by a federal grand jury on a charge of sending obscene matter through the mail.

WAR PERIL SEEN BY MUSSOLINI

Rome, May 8 (AP)—Premier Mussolini in a report to the Chamber of Deputies today justified maintenance of the special tribunal for defense of the state as "necessary not only for the peace of the country but even for the peace of Europe."

He asserted that "frontier incidents," interpreted as a reference to recent difficulties along the Jugoslavian border, must be suppressed or they would become sparks which might be fanned into the flames of war.

ARCHDUKE WILL WED AMERICAN

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Vienna, May 8—Mrs. Alicia Coburn of New York hailed Archduke Leopold Salvator of Austria out of the Tombs when he was arrested for complicity in the theft of Archduchess Maria Therese's $400,000 necklace in New York last July.

Now Archduke Leopold, possessor of one of the most distinguished titles in the Hapsburg lineage, definitely discloses that he will marry Mrs. Coburn shortly in Paris.

Despite Archduke Leopold's flat declaration, mystery is attached to the romance, since there has been unearthed no record of his divorce under the Austrian law, because he is of the Catholic faith which does not permit divorces.

Leopold, who is 34, married Baroness Dagmar of Nicolics-Podrinkas in Vienna in April, 1919. They have one child, a girl.

His romance with Mrs. Coburn, who resides at 250 E. 87th st., New York city, began sometime before Leopold's arrest in New York in the Maria Therese necklace case. He was acquitted of complicity in the theft of the famous Napoleonic collar of his aunt in November.

R. I. Man in Crash, Dies

New Haven, Ct., May 8 (AP)—Howard H. Lord of Providence, R. I., who was hurt in a headon collision of automobiles today, died several hours later. He had been living in Cheshire.

170 MILLION IS CENSUS LIMIT

Washington, May 8 (AP)—At least one government economist believes there are not enough children to indicate that the United States' population ever will rise above 170,000,000.

Dr. O. E. Baker of the agriculture department said that unless the birth rate rises or immigration laws are liberalized the population in 30 years will become stationary at less than 170,000,000.

Rural sections, he said, have a surplus of youngsters above the number needed for an even population, but no more than required to balance the city deficiency.

SCAPINI OPENS FIRE ON BRIAND

Paris, May 8 (AP)—The second day of debate on the Austro-German customs agreement was opened today in the Chamber of Deputies by Deputy Scapini, blinded in the war, who once toured the United States under the auspices of the American Legion.

Scapini said the negotiations between Berlin and Vienna proved the scheme of European collaboration conceived by M. Briand was not taken seriously on the other side of the Rhine, and pointed to the deadlock on tri-partite naval treaty as further proof of the failure of the foreign minister's policies.

M. Briand's friends predicted he would receive a triumphant majority when a vote is taken tonight or tomorrow on his conduct of the foreign office.

The Radical-Socialists decided today to introduce a resolution expressing opposition to the Austro-German pact.

U. S. Seeks $354,000 Tax From Gambler

Chicago, May 8 (AP)—Federal officials filed claim for $354,639 today against James Hackett, suburban gambling czar, on the charge that he paid no tax on an income of $2,000,000 between 1914 and 1929.

Hackett, wealthy Blue Island resident, said last week he had been kidnaped and $150,000 ransom money paid for his release. Federal agents who investigated his income characterized his story as an attempt to evade tax payments.

GARRETT SEALS LIPS AS CASE CONCLUDES

The Garrett snowball, that grew and grew and grew, stands melting in the sun today.

Hands that rolled it are thawing out. Feet that grew cold as it grew in size are warming up.

The dirt it collected with the snow is vanishing with the snow.

Its momentum is lost. It can't be pushed any farther. It won't grow any bigger. It will melt away.

Soon it will be an easy handful for a small boy. Presently it will be gone altogether.

JUSTICE SERVED

For the next two years—or for the next 17 months until he is eligible for parole—Oliver B. Garrett will go about the county business of tending pigs, hoeing carrots or making shoes, whatever task is set for him on Deer Island.

If the thought occurs that he'll have to tend a lot of pigs, or hoe a lot of carrots, or make a lot of shoes to be worth the $100,000 the state and county spent to put him on the island, it should not prove too disturbing; the ends of justice are served.

Public reaction to the end of the Garrett case is apt to be moulded along these lines:

1—Thank goodness that's over!

2—He admitted his guilt after two juries refused to find him guilty.

3—He went to jail with his mouth shut.

There were few folk who believed Garrett to be anything but guilty. There were few who did not think he should be punished by the law. Yet, after the first couple of years, people began to tire a little of the Garrett case and turn to more diverting news, and publicly express the hope that some day they'd get somewhere with that fellow Garrett."

TERM SUFFICIENT

There is none to question the wisdom of accepting the Garrett plea and there should be none to question the merit of his two-year sentence. Nobody wanted to see Garrett spend 503 years in prison.

But there is a little gall in the fact that two juries couldn't arrive at the decision which Garrett himself finally thrust into the hands of justice.

Certain jurymen, perhaps, will be astounded to learn that Garrett admits in every count the truth of the charges they doubted, but they may console themselves with the thought that anyone is apt to make an honest mistake.

TWO ON BLIMP DIE IN SQUALL

Newport News, Va., May 8—A squall which came up without warning last night parted a cable by which wreckage of the Army blimp TC-10-252 was being towed down back river to Langley Field, and resulted in the drowning of two soldiers.

Privates James H. McDonald of Natick, Mass., and Oscar J. Brabits of Shamokin, Penn., were thrown from the towing boat and their bodies were not recovered.

The blimp, returning to Langley Field after taking representatives of Governor Pollard to the Shannandoah apple blossom festival, was forced down by faulty gasoline feed pipes last night after cruising around for hours in a dense fog. It was badly torn when it crashed into a tree. The bag was dragged to the river and made fast to the boat.

Col. Kerr Quits British Liberals

London, May 8 (AP)—Col. Charles Kerr today announced his resignation as chairman of the executive committee of the National Liberal Council, emphasizing the growing split in the Liberal party ranks.

In a letter Kerr said he was out of sympathy with the majority of the parliamentary party in supporting the present government.

Dog Chews Up Master's Pet Book

Omaha Neb., May 7 (AP)—William J. Hayes has a dog that won't mind. The neighbors complained.

William locked the animal up in his automobile in which he left a book of which he was fond.

The dog chewed up the book. It's title was: "The Master Revenge."

GARRETT GOES TO ISLAND FOR 'GOOD TIME'

and for whose health he claims he "took the rap."

He had said farewell to his wife's sister and to his father who, arriving from New York with the expectation of attending the third trial, learned that his son had confessed.

GOES AWAY IN IRONS

Shortly before noon he ate the best part of a baked haddock, was handcuffed to James McDonald, bound for a stay on the island for larceny, and with four other prisoners climbed into the jail van bound for the boat.

Court Officer James McNulty was in charge of the motor trip. Bell clanging, the van sped through No. Grove st., into Cambridge st., through Bowdoin sq., Hanover st., Fleet st. and into Atlantic ave. to the wharf.

A fleet of taxicabs, chartered by newspapermen, followed in its wake. The cavalcade attracted considerable attention from pedestrians and there were shouts of:

"There goes Garrett."

From the outside it was impossible to make out the faces of the men in the van through the one-foot iron grill.

A traffic officer called, "Hi, Ollie," as the van swept past him.

The trip from jail to wharf was made in six minutes, and throughout that period the van gong rang merrily.

The gong, however, was no merrier than the former policeman as he stepped from the van at the wharf.

The other five prisoners started swiftly for the detention room there, but Garrett checked them as the newspapermen gathered around.

IN A MERRY MOOD

"Wait a minute, fellows; let's give these boys a break," he called.

The group halted and Garrett tipped his light grey felt back on his head and smiled.

"All right, boys, line up the cameras and take a good one," he said. "It's the last shot you'll get."

The boys lined up the cameras and shutters clicked. Oliver B. Garrett on his way to the island was preserved for posterity in a grey suit, a light blue shirt, blue and grey tie and a broad smile.

The prisoners filed into the detention room to await the boat and Garrett called Court Officer McNulty to him and shook hands.

"Good luck, now, Jim," he said.

Then to the reporters grouped around him he held out his hand and with them shook hands.

"What have you got to say, Ollie?" they asked.

Said Garrett:

"All I have to say is that I wish all you fellows in the newspaper business the best of luck. There isn't a single fellow in the business that I don't wish the best of luck, and there is one who, I hope, has every bit of luck that is possible as long as he lives. You all know whom I mean."

Apparently he made reference to a reporter who at both trials was a witness in his defense.

JOKES AS HE SAILS.

Some one called, jokingly:

"I hope you have a good time, Ollie."

He laughed.

"Don't worry, boy," he said. "I'll have a good time."

A crowd of more than 300 saw him off. They were kept back from the wharf by a detail of police. There was no demonstration.

The prisoners filed aboard the city institutions steamer, Michael J. Perkins, shortly before 2:30. Garrett walked last in line of prisoners, head up, smiling, smoking a fresh cigarette.

The cameras clicked again and he said:

"Still at it, huh?"

HAILED BY WOMEN.

He was about 20 feet from the gangplank when a husky, overalled teamster, cupping his hands about his mouth, shouted:

"It was your big mouth that got you this stretch."

Garrett turned and his smile faded. He forgot to puff on his cigarette. During the remainder of his walk to the boat he kept staring back over his shoulder as if to see who had shouted, or, having seen, to remember the face.

It was visiting day at the island and a group of visitors, many of them women, were on the deck of the steamer when the prisoners filed aboard to be led below.

"Hullo, Garrett," a woman shouted from the top deck. Garrett looked up and said nothing.

He disappeared an instant later down a companionway. At exactly 2:52 p. m. the lines were cast off, the steamer tooted, and the "car" went into exile.

DOWN THE HARBOR

Fate typed for the social column (Mechanic Falls Me.) papers please copy), the following:

"Among those sailing for Deer Island today aboard the S. S. Michael J. Perkins, was Oliver B. Garrett, handcuffed to a thief. His stay at the island resort will extend from 17 months to two years."

George Garrett, the confessed grafter's father, arrived from New York this morning with the expectation of attending the opening of the third Garrett trial. Instead he found his son preparing to start for Deer Island.

He went at once to Charles st. jail and spent an hour with him. Later, he said:

"I asked him how he happened to change his plea. He said: 'Well, dad, they would have gone on trying it forever, and it would have been a case of going up and going through the same thing over and over again.

"'Florence is all in from the other two trials and I didn't think she would be able to stand another one, so I just decided to take the rap alone.

"'When I was sure they would not bother her or Miss Hitch any more, I decided that I would plead and take the sentence.

DID THE "BEST THING."

"'I'm going down there and I shall abide by all the rules, and the sooner it's over the better it'll be.'

"I said to him, 'Well, son, it's your business. You know what you are doing, but I'm sorry to see you go down.'

"'I am sorry. I feel the same way as any other father would, but as I told him he knows his business, and, after all, if he had been found guilty by a jury, there is no question but that he would have been given a longer sentence and would have gone to State Prison.

"After talking with him, I am satisfied he did the best thing. I am glad that it is all over and I will be glad when the whole thing is out of the papers entirely."

Mrs. Garrett, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Fletcher, arrived while Garrett was saying goodby to his father, Miss Hatch arrived later.

Garrett breakfasted on cereal, bread and coffee, and shortly before noon had his last meal at Charles st. jail.

Penal Institutions Commissioner William O'Hare issued a statement barring the press at the island and indicating that Garrett was abnormal. He said:

"We want this man to get back to normal as soon as possible."

He said Garrett would be treated as any other prisoner.

When, if ever, the case of Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch, co-defendants with Garrett on a charge of conspiracy to extort, will be heard is not known. They have been continued indefinitely.

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman denied emphatically early today a report that he had ordered a police trial board to prepare charges against police officers mentioned in the Warner investigation of Garrett's activities.

GOVERNORS SET TO FIGHT FOR RAIL CONTROL

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

An attempt to persuade the Pennsylvania Railroad to relinquish its grip of control upon the New Haven and the Boston & Maine Railroads will be made by the governors of New England as the result of the striking report made to them by their joint railroad committee, it was learned today.

"New England must and shall control her own railroads, because we of New England are the only ones primarily interested in our own welfare," declared former Gov. Huntley N. Spaulding of New Hampshire, chairman of the governors' committee.

MASTERS NOT WANTED

"We shall let public opinion reflect in our report first.

"When the self-pride and patriotic sentiment of New England unites, the outside railroads will learn that they are wanted in New England as customers, supplying service to us, and not as our masters.

"If friendly negotiation does not enable us to obtain voluntary release from control by Pennsylvania, the only course left open to break that control is by resort to every legal means at our disposal."

On the heels of this statement, the Boston Evening American learned authoritatively the viewpoint expressed by General Atterbury president of the Pennsylvania, in his recent conference with Governor Ely.

Atterbury said the Pennsylvania preferred to remain in New England through its stock ownerships in the Boston and Maine and New Haven.

STRONG FOR N. E. OWNERSHIP

He indicated that the financial interests might be willing to spend some $40,000,000 in electrifying the New Haven, whose electrical service runs only from New York to New Haven.

He intimated that the Pennsylvania might get out if it could receive definite assurance that the rival Van Sweringen interests would not be permitted to gain control over the Boston and Maine.

Governor Ely wants "alien" ownership to cease and the trunkline railroads then to be permitted to supply service to New England on the terms agreed upon by the New England railroads themselves.

In the event a fight is necessary, Attorney Bentley Warren has advised the New England Governors and the Governors' Committee that the New England states might proceed against the Pennsylvania under the prohibitions of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

DIRTY TRICKS

A fellow calling his wife with the bad news that he would probably be tied up all night in conference helping to save the business from utter ruin was somewhat embarrassed by a prankish pal who shook a glass tumbler, filled with a handful of small coins, near the mouthpiece of the phone. You see, it sounds like a cocktail shaker on the rampage. Try it some time—but don't drink it!

GANGSTER GAG

One of our racketeers recently taken for a ride, held captive and shaken down for a dozen G's, paid off his captors in notes, and figured it out that he had done a smart piece of business.

He was released and confident to his pals, "Yah! They aren't smart. I paid them off in notes and let them TRY and collect!"

"Fresh!" yanked the pale, producing slips of paper from their several pockets, "We discounted those notes for them before they'd let you go. You better HAD pay up!"

He did.

Hank, the terrible telegrapher, reports on his Simplex telegraph machine that "I have a flock of hens who lay eggs like this: 000000-0000000000000." Which is rather cute in view of the limitation of Simplex machines for minor piecesaries.

THIS PROHIBITION

In the window of a costumer's shop near Dudley Terminal is a full suit of knight's armor. From beneath the raised visor of the helmet peers a mask of a man with a crapulous countenance and a nose as red as an ITOA taxi. The other night a convivial fellow with an equally vivid proboscis (such gobrand words!) lurched up to the window, took one look at the knight, and shook his head sorrowfully. "Howinell am I ever going to get THOSE pants off?" he asked himself as he staggered away, mulling over the notion that somehow or other he had inserted himself into a suit of chilled steel drinking clothes.

Rutgers Student's "Suicide" Doubted

New Brunswick, N. J., May 8 (AP)—Rutgers University authorities learning that Robert W. Stout, 21-year-old student missing since Tuesday, had withdrawn his account at a local bank, said today they did not believe he had taken his life.

He left a note to his roommate, saying:

"They cannot find me or my body. Do not let them search."

HUB DEMAND FOR COAL RATE CUT FOUGHT

Washington, May 8 (AP)—Eastern railroads renewed protests today before the Interstate Commerce Commission against a complaint launched by Walter Young of Boston against rates on anthracite coal between Pennsylvania and New England territory.

The railroads contended Young had acted in violation of the code of ethics adopted by practicing attorneys before the commission in soliciting coal merchants of six New England States as clients in the proceedings.

They presented a circular letter reputed to have been circulated by Young throughout the territory offering to represent them in the coal rate case on the condition that they pay him a commission amounting to 1 cent per ton of coal received last year from the Pennsylvania anthracite region.

The Young letter, they charged, informed the coal dealers they were compelled to become a party to his suit if they desired protesting the present coal rates.

A previous petition of the carriers asking for a preliminary hearing on that phase of the situation recently was denied by the commission, which set June 30 for the taking of testimony in the case in Boston.

WORLD PARLEY ON SILVER IS PROPOSED

Washington, May 8 (AP)—The resolutions committee of the International Chamber of Commerce today approved a resolution proposing a world conference on the depressed price of silver.

The resolution, submitted by a special committee of representatives from the interested nations, was approved without change. It was expected to reach a vote in the plenary session of the chamber tomorrow.

The resolution follows:

"The International Chamber of Commerce, realizing the serious consequences of the present silver situation to the economic condition of the world, considers the convocation during the current year of a conference for the purpose of seeking a solution to the problem, at which all interested bodies may be heard, to be eminently desirable, and urges the national committee to bring the matter to the attention of their respective governments."

MAYOR FAILS TO SAVE FINE

Imagine the embarrassment of Albert D. Rudenstein in Malden court today.

Rudenstein, manager of a Malden theater, was fined $10 for traffic violation in spite of the fact that he spoke to "his friend, Mayor Hastings, about it."

"He said he would speak to the police and they must have forgotten it," he told Judge Elbridge G. Davis after he pleaded guilty.

"Oh, no they didn't," spoke up Police Capt. John H. Aylward. "He did speak to me about it, but I didn't forget it."

Mayor Hastings and Police Commissioner Artemas B. Sweezey only recently settled differences that at one time brought a threat from the mayor toward removal of the police head.

Redford Autoist Jailed in Contempt

Because Judge Louis Greed saw the car of Arthur B. Floyd of Medford parked outside Cambridge courthouse today after Floyd had testified it was wrecked in a crash Floyd was sentenced to five days in jail for contempt of court.

Floyd, suing a food company for $400, charged a truck of the company struck and so wrecked his car that it was no use to him.

Judge Green left court for luncheon, the car was pointed out to him and the sentence followed after a verdict for the defendant in the civil suit.

Two Jailed After Hell's Kitchen Raid

Two men arrested as a result of a raid on a resort in the Hell's Kitchen district of Quincy were fined and given jail sentences in Quincy Court today.

The men are Joseph Martini, 24, sentenced to three months in the House of Correction and fined $200, and Patsy Ricchardi, 65, given a five months' sentence and fined $. Police said the place was filled with mixed colored and white couples drinking at tables.

McCormick-Gattis Wedding This Week

Honolulu, H. I., May 8 (INS)—John McCormick, film director and ex-husband of Colleen Moore, film actress, today said he and Mrs. Jane Gattis, prominent Washington, D. C., society matron, will be married here before the end of the week. Mrs. Gattis' mother arrived here yesterday.

BEAUTIFUL—

AND NOT SO DUMB

THE modern girl holds many a trick in her wise little head. She has a shrewd sense of line and color. With deft strokes she accents her good points. And she has learned that good health is the foundation of all natural beauty.

A lovely skin, lively eyes and radiant youth are not things that can be bought at any price. For these are the outward signs of a body that is healthy within.

One of the most treacherous enemies of health is constipation. Its poisons undermine beauty. Skins turn to a sickly yellow. Eyes lose their sparkle. Pimples appear. Headaches, dizziness, spells of depression become frequent.

Constipation usually results from lack of roughage in the diet. Today, you can obtain this vital element in a delicious, non-fattening cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Two tablespoonfuls daily will prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. How much safer than using dangerous pills and drugs!

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Tweed Topcoat Is Necessity

By ANN ARDEN.

WHEN TRAVELING there is just no chance of proceeding at all comfortably unless a top coat makes the trip too. There are draughts, there are cool evenings, there are rainy days and there are even blanketless nights when that one member of your wardrobe will be your firmest friend.

THEREFORE it must be light in weight, it must be warm in texture and it must be of some color that will not show dust and spots nor will it muss unduly. A large category for one small coat, but it can be done.

TWEED is the best choice and tweeds can be found in the shops this season in possibly the most brilliant form that they have managed to attain for years. Those of mixed surface are as smart as can be and they can be selected with so really neutral an appearance that they are effective with many different sorts of dresses and suits.

FUR COLLARS are good and those without any trimming are just as good.

A COAT with a cheerful future is the model pictured of tweed in brown and white herringbone mixture, having trim notched collar and revers, ragian shoulders, belt of the material, vertical pockets, brown bone buttons and buckle. This semi-rough tweed is swagger for country wear. The hat is brown, finely stitched, an excellent sport model, in suede finish, ribbon banded, and adorned with varicolored feather. The brown umbrella has ivory tip, and head of your favorite canine.

UMBRELLAS have been getting so doggy lately that it's hard to keep up with the newest shapes and handles. Handbags aren't behaving one whit better, which, of course, makes buying one all the more delightful. And handkerchiefs have entirely flabbergasted us so that we're tempted to buy every new design gayly out on the counter.

IT'S WHEN the three of them get together and form a smart triple alliance that we fall because it's just about the last word in accessory chic to flaunt a handbag, an umbrella and a handkerchief, all beautifully matching.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American, or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

BAGNI SLAYERS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCES

Bootleg gin and a gun escorted three Somerville boys of 19 behind the bars of State Prison today for the remainder of their lives.

John J. Oliver, Walter Sousa and John D. Wall were sentenced to life imprisonment, sentence made mandatory by the second degree verdict returned last night in the Bagni case.

Standing, hands gripping the front rail of the prisoners' dock, knuckles white, heads lowered, the trio of slayers heard sentence pronounced . . . "first day in solitary confinement, the remainder of your natural life at hard labor."

They said nothing, there being nothing to say.

In the momentary hush following the sentence the sobs of several women were audible—relatives of the condemned youths. Their mothers were not in court. Their fathers were, tight-lipped in anguish.

The courtroom held a capacity crowd in which there were many women, but Mrs. Evangelista Bagni, widow of the slain man, and her two daughters and a son, present throughout the trial, were not present.

Shackled to court officers, the three young slayers were led away to East Cambridge jail from which they started, soon after, for Charlestown.

LIFE BEHIND BARS

Crime loses three promising young patrons.

. . . for the rest of your natural life" is a long time to sit in a prison cell, behind bars, away from the sun, and think about gin and guns and murder.

Did you ever watch three boys receive the news that never again, while they breathed, would they breathe air not fouled by the stench of prison?

Did you ever watch three lads of high school age bear that forever and henceforth they were outcasts of civilization, to be kept in a dim world apart from society?

Sit for 10 minutes in the first session of Middlesex superior criminal court where for two weeks, John J. Oliver, Walter Sousa and John D. Wall have been on trial for the murder of Evangelista Bagni, Somerville filling station attendant, father of three children.

JURORS AWAIT VERDICT

Court is five minutes of 10 o'clock the night. The jury, completed only [illegible] the court reached into the highways and byways for the 12th man, has been deliberating, since 2:25 in the afternoon It is coming in now. With a verdict that may take three lives.

Up the stairs and into the hushed courtroom came Walsh, Oliver and Sousa.

In the cage with them. The jury enters. Judge Gibbs takes the bench. Clerk Bean polls the jury . . . "Here" and "here" and "here," each juror standing, the court officer counting.

"Mr. Foreman and gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed on a verdict as to each of the defendants."

John A. Fry, wealthy foreman, his own face pale, responds.

"We have."

"John D. Wall, hold up your right hand and look upon the jury, Mr. Foreman, look upon the prisoner."

Wall stands. He does not look upon the jury, he looks upon the floor. His raised hand is a fist, fingers clenched in the palm.

"What say you now, is the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty."

"Guilty of what?"

"Guilty of murder in the second degree."

Wall shudders and his fist drops to rest on the bronze grill of the dock.

"You may sit down."

The same procedure with Oliver —Oliver the "bad man" of the trio, stocky, mouth open, afraid, and then with Sousa.

"Guilty in the second degree."

CHURCHES BACK BIRTH CONTROL MOVEMENT

Council Bluffs, Ia., May 8 (INS)—By a vote of 70 to 25, the Congregational Christian conference of Iowa today had adopted a resolution favoring the dissemination of birth-control information.

In spite of determined efforts of older members of the conference, the resolution was pushed through late yesterday, after a motion to table it had failed by a narrow margin.

It was expressed by the Rev. W. S. Richards of Milford as "our duty and opportunity to vote for the resolution to help that class of people who need it—namely, the poorer class."

The resolution will be presented to the National Council of Congregational Churches in Seattle, Wash., in June.

Wall, were found guilty of murdering Evangelista Bagni, a Somerville gas station manager, in a cold-blooded "thrill" robbery. They are being escorted by jail officials. Note the wistful smile on Oliver's boyish face, the sober, thoughtful mien of Wall and the drooping, hapless figure of Sousa

The last time we advertised suits like these, we had about 600 in stock. They were sold-out by Saturday noon! The men who bought them easily recognized the thoroughbred fabrics as being select members of that expensive group that "wear like iron"—and hold a press for a long time.

These 833 new arrivals boast of the same qualities. There are 24 pattern-designs from which to choose—many in the very popular solid colors. English custom designing gives them the brisk, keen style and appearance of costly clothes.

We believe you've never seen suits like these for less than $40. We know that nobody in town is showing them anywhere near our price of $25, with two trousers. See them today or tomorrow!

LAW DELEGATES AT ODDS OVER STATUTES

Washington, May 8 (AP)—A lively discussion of proposed statutes dealing with criminal law administration and a call on President and Mrs. Hoover today varied the program of delegates to the American Law Institute convention.

Circumstances under which an officer may kill or wound in making an arrest were involved in one of three laws suggested to the institute to help improve crime administration.

Opinion among the more than 700 delegates was divided on this as on the other two proposed statutes up for discussion.

One covered the summoning of witnesses in one state to testify in another. The differences on this aroused almost non-controversial in comparison with the discussions over the other proposed law which would govern the right to comment on the fact the defendant did not testify.

Paris, May 8 (INS)—Traveling incognito while in France is becoming more popular and less successful every day.

George Bernard Shaw tried the traditional dark blue glasses when he went to see one of his own plays performed in French, but he forgot to shave. The crowd proved its sharpness by yelling "author, author."

Shaw fled from the theater into a taxicab, mistaking it for his own car.

TWO FLEE JAIL IN BRIDGEPORT

Bridgeport, Ct., May 8—W. H. Harkens, who called himself "Lieutenant" Harkens and claimed to have been a World War aviator, escaped with Frederick Santos, 17, of Concord st., Boston, from county jail here today by use of a bedsheet rope.

A jail guard went to the cell to let Harkins and two mates out for breakfast. They shoved out a gun and forced him down the corridor. The gun had no firing pin. A trusty was blined by pepper and salt thrown into his face. The three men pushed out bars in a window, made a rope of a bedsheet and Harkens and Santos slid to the ground. Joseph Vanderveer got stuck in the window and the trusty seized him.

Harkens, known to police elsewhere as Scott, was arrested in Stratford, February 12, on a bad check charge. He was in a car with a Tennessee registration and said Memphis was his home. Mrs. Elsie Stone of New York was with him and is held as a witness.

Harkens was given a mental examination and found sane. Police learned he had escaped jail in Louisiana and Minnesota.

Santos was being held on a burglary charge.

2-Hour Phone Talk With His Girl Leaves Him a 'Prisoner'

Omaha, Neb., May 8 (AP)—Jens Minther, producing a nickel, walked into a drug store, entered the telephone booth, called up his girl and started to talk. That was 9 p. m.

Around 11 p. m. the druggist put out the cat, turned off the lights, locked up and went home.

Some time thereafter Minther hung up and found himself a prisoner. He hailed a cab driver and police were called. They doubted Minther's sincerity.

"Call her up if you don't believe me," Minther said.

DOCTOR DENIES AUTO FRAUD

New York, May 8—Dr. Alfred Johnson, testifying before the grievance committee of the County Medical Association which is investigating charges of "ambulance chasing," denied collusion in an attempt to defraud a Boston insurance company in a bogus automobile accident in 1927.

Dr. Johnson said he was suspicious of an accident in which four women and a man were hurt, and reported his suspicions to the Massachusetts Bonding Company.

BERNARD SHAW HITS AT PRESS

London, May 8 (AP)—For 10 minutes today Bernard Shaw entertained the British Institute of Journalists, closing a characteristic speech with the toast: "The profession of journalism—God help it!"

"Is it a profession," he demanded, "or is it the last refuge of any young person who is hopelessly illiterate and hopelessly inaccurate."

One of journalism's difficult problems, he said, is to eliminate the time lag—the inability to recognize that a thing has happened when it has happened.

"Most people," said he, "take about twenty years to realize that something has happened. The world has not yet realized that the Russian revolution has taken place. The British press has not yet found out that the Soviet Union has come to stay.

"In consequence we have thrown away one of the most magnificent commercial chances we can ever hope to see in our lifetime."

Gold Rush Narrowly Averted in Yard at Harvard

While making soundings of the Harvard yard at the rear of Appleton Chapel in preparation for the erection of Harvard's new $1,500,000 World War Memorial Chapel, workmen came upon a vein of ore and imbedded in the quartz were glittering particles of yellow mineral that had all the appearances of unmined gold.

Much excitement prevailed, as a hurry call was sent for some of Harvard's geologists, and students began to mark off their claims in choice sections of the yard.

The geologist arrived, looked over the stone and grinned. "It's mica," he confided.

Spanish Conquer Rebels in Morocco

Tangier, Morocco, May 8 (AP)—Word from Souk-el-Arba, where a body of Spanish legionnaires mutinied said today that the rebellion had been put down.

Regular troops surrounded the mutineers, closed in on them and disarmed them without bloodshed.

TROOPS QUELL STUDENT RIOTS

Montevideo, Uruguay, May 8 (AP)—Reports from Buenos Aires today said the local political situation there had become so serious that President Uriburu had ordered several regiments of cavalry into the city to suppress student disorders.

Demonstrations against the government, which have been recurring for several days, seemed to be taking on a more violent character, the reports said.

Yesterday police charged a mob, injuring several.

Today the newspaper La Libertad, an independent Socialist organ was suspended. The newspaper La Critica remains under suspension and its editor, Natalio Botana, is under arrest.

Last night a crowd in the streets hailed General Justo, former minister of war, appealing to him to "save Argentina."

Dresses Stolen

Miss Maybelle La Bloire of Pawtucket, R. I., reported to police that dresses worth $200 were stolen from her auto in Dorchester.

Spiked Fence to End Poker Games in This Cemetery

New Haven, Ct., May 8 (INS)—Though historic Grove St. Cemetery, where many of Connecticut's military, civic and educational leaders are buried, is surrounded by a 15-foot stone wall, the barrier is so ineffective that trustees have ordered a five-foot iron fence topped with sharp spikes, placed on top of the wall.

The fence was ordered when it was found that the graves and tombs were being converted into card tables for dozen of men who scaled the walls with apparent ease.

Worker Injured on Newton Job

The first accident on the construction of the police headquarters building in Washington st., West Newton, occurred yesterday when a nail projecting from a board punctured the right ear of one of the workmen.

DEATH SLEEP IS ADVOCATED BY PHYSICIANS

Chicago, May 8 (INS)—The Illinois Homeopathic Medical Association today had before it the suggestion of Dr. L. Merrill Henikoff for a law to authorize administering a painless death sleep to imbeciles. Since it was adjudged a matter improper for discussion by the convention as a whole, the suggestion has been referred to the legislative committee.

Dr. Henikoff, speaking at the association's meeting, said:

"The cost of maintaining idiots and sufferers from malignant cancer runs into millions every year, while the legal recognition of euthanasia (painless death) would in addition to the economic saving, relieve worlds of heartbreak and needless suffering."

MANY WANT TO DIE.

Dr. William Alva Guild, legislative chairman of the Midwest association, and Dr. Frank Branen of Chicago also favored euthanasia with proper legal safeguards. Said Dr. Guild:

"We have had a great number of patients who have asked us to put them out of their misery when they were suffering from an incurable disease. Situations arise in which it is a question whether to prolong life is desirable."

SAFEGUARDS NEEDED

Dr. Branen said:

"I would favor such a law if the proper safeguards were set up against unscrupulous relatives or other persons conspiring with unscrupulous doctors to accomplish the death of some one.

2-GUN CROWLEY TO FACE TRIAL AS KILLER

and the wounding of Crowley, was described by Commissioner Mulrooney as the "most thrilling and dramatic experience" he ever had in 30 years as a police officer.

It was the murder of a young dance hall hostess—Virginia Brannen, from Bangor, Me.—which started the police hunt for Crowley April 27, even before he slew Policeman Hirsch, and it was a dance hall hostess—Billie Dunne—who led to his capture.

Police revealed today that on Wednesday, as Crowley, with 16-year-old Helen Walsh, fled from the most intense man hunt in New York in years, Crowley telephoned Billie Dunne at the apartment where she had been living.

He told her to "get out;" that he was bringing "a regular girl" to occupy the apartment.

POLICE GET TIP.

Billie Dunn that night told several persons at the dance hall about it. One who heard it relayed it to the police. The watch on the apartment was set, resulting in yesterday's seige and fighting.

Although Crowley originally was sought as the Virginia Brannen killer, it was his companion, Duringer, who confessed the crime last night. Crowley admitted the Hirsch murder.

One of the half dozen witnesses that moved in and out of the grand jury rooms at Mineola today was the Walsh girl. She was in tears as she entered, and she still was crying when she emerged. As she posed for photographers she broke into violent sobbing.

District Attorney Edwards said the girl would not be indicted and that she might not even see the inside of a cell. Physicians had advised the district attorney that unless her health was watched carefully, she might suffer a nervous breakdown which would possibly prevent her testifying. She was removed to a private home, the location of which was kept secret, where she will be given "medical and maternal care" under guard until needed.

Another witness was Officer Peter Yodice, who was the companion of Hirsch when the latter was shot as he came upon Crowley, seated with the Walsh girl in a parked car, and recognized him.

An ambulance left Mineola shortly before noon to re-move Crowley from Bellevue Hospital, Manhattan, to Mineola, describing the murder of Miss Brannen, said he was in a car with Crowley. He said he was semi-intoxicated and said to her:

"You're the only girl I love."

"But I'm going to be married to someone else," she replied.

Durninger, according to the police, drew his gun and "plugged" her. They tossed her body into a secluded roadway in Yonkers.

CROWLEY CONFESSES

Crowley himself, though wounded, was boastful when questioned. He said he "didn't mean no harm to nobody," but that he started "killing cops" because "it was about the only sensation left."

"Sure, I killed Hirsch," he said. "I took his own gun and used it in standing off you guys last night."

The apartment which became the battleground for the capture of the thugs and the 16-year-old Walsh girl is on West 90th st., near Riverside Drive.

Detectives went there and found a note on the bell in the hallway addressed to "Murray and Red" saying:

"I've gone out to do some shopping."

Additional police were called and planted in an apartment adjoining Crowley's. A squeaking floorboard alarmed Crowley and his companions and they began shooting through the walls.

CHOP HOLES IN ROOF

Thus began a siege and fight such as upper Manhattan never had seen. Every means of escape was cut off—fire escapes, hallways and windows. Police details went to the roof, chopping holes in it. Volleys of shots poured up as their axes smashed openings, but no officers were hit.

Crowley stood below, guns blazing from each hand. When he was arrested a pistol was found strapped to his waist, another to his ankle. Duringer, 200-pound truckman, fought off the police with one weapon. The Walsh girl stood with them, calling hysterical encouragement. When the surrender finally took place she was screaming. For her the surrender capped a week in which she had seen murdr done, participated in fight from police with a hunted killer and finally found in standing off a small army of police.

CROWD WATCHES BATTLE

As police chopped the first hole over the bedroom, the youths retreated to the living room. Another hole was opened over them there. With a volley at the opening, they retreated to the kitchen. When another hole was made, Crowley called out that he would "give up."

But it was not all shooting that went on in that apartment as police bombarded it and an excited throng watched from behind police lines.

When the apartment was surrounded by police, Crowley and the girl both had scribbled notes. The killer's message, scrawled on a scrap of paper, read:

"To whom it may concern:

"I was born on the 31st. She (obviously Helen Walsh) was born on the 13th. I guess it was fate that made us meet.

NEW SENSATION

"When I die put a lily in my hand and let the boys know how they'll look. Underneath my coat will be a weary heart what wouldn't harm anybody.

"I had nothing else to do; that's why I went around bumpin' off cops.

"Now that my death (the last word has a line run through it) is so near (more scratches), as a couple of bulls are at the door and saying 'come here.' I am behind the door with three .38s, one of which belongs to my friend who put on weight so quick in North Merrick (a sardonic reference to the murder of Patrolman Hirsch). He would have got me if his bullets were any good."

The note broke off at this point. A smudge, apparently blood, caused it to end in a blur.

BOYS GREAT TO ME

The girl wrote

"I had a good time while it lasted. The boys were great to me. They even washed my pajamas. He was a great fellow. If I die, powder my nose, manicure my nails, and put a lily in my hand. I am"—— and here the scrawl ended.

Asked by newspaper men how Crowley had killed the policeman, she replied:

"Well, we were in the automobile when the cop came up and asked Frank for his license. Frank pretended to reach for it. Instead of that he pulled his gun and shot the policeman."

How many guns did Frank generally carry?" she was asked.

"Well, he had two with him then."

She and the two men went to the

DAVIS PLEADS FOR NATION TO BE PREPARED

Pittsburgh, May 8 (INS)—A vigorous plea for national preparedness was voiced today by Senator James J. Davis (R.) of Pennsylvania, at the presentation of the William Randolph Hearst trophy and awards to members of the Carnegie R. O. T. C. rifle team.

He said:

"You are acquiring proficiency as marksmen and sharpshooters, not as a threat against any other nation, but rather as a matter of national self-defense. While our nation is sincerely desirous of world peace, it must keep itself prepared to defend itself in the event of an attack by an agressive nation.

"It might be well for you to heed the creed of Americanism upheld by the sponsor of these matches, William Randolph Hearst, who, during his long and brilliant career as a newspaperman and publisher, has persistently urged our nation to adhere to the policies of sound Americanism as sponsored by George Washington and Abraham Lincoln."

FLIER WILLIAMS JAILED BY WIFE IN SUIT

New York, May 8 (INS)—Roger Q. Williams, transatlantic flyer, was arrested at his hotel today at the instigatio of his wife, Mrs. Carrie T. Williams, who is suing for separation.

His arrest put a temporary end to the round-the-world flight he planned with Prince Jean Ghica, Rumanian air minister and cousin of King Carol.

Williams was taken to the sheriff's office to be held until he posted $200 bond, guaranteeing temporary alimony of $250 a month.

In her suit Mrs. Williams revealed she and her distinguished husband had been separated for three years, although she continued to appear with him at public functions "to protect his reputation." She said she had seen him only six times since April, 1928, when he told her, she averred, "he couldn't be bothered with her any more."

CERMAK FINDS $40,024 GONE

Chicago, May 8 (INS)—In an official auditor's report to Mayor Anton J. Cermak, it was revealed today a shortage of $40,024 exists in the city treasurer's office.

In March, it was reported, the shortage amounted to $109,215, but $40,000 was restored by friends of Charles S. Peterson, former city treasurer. After the payment of the $40,000, the deficiency on April 10 totaled $69,231 when James A. Kearns, newly-elected treasurer, took office, the auditor's report said.

Of this amount, $29,146 was returned to the treasury after a demand was made on August F. Singer, who took office when Peterson was appointed city comptroller.

ITALY LEANS TO GERMAN PLEA

This is one of the problems Dino Grandi and Arthur Henderson, Italian and British foreign ministers will discuss at Geneva next Wednesday prior to the League of Nations Council meeting.

COURTAULD ON HIS WAY BACK

Copenhagen, May 8 (INS)—The dramatic story of Augustine Courtauld's lonely vigil throughout the winter on the Greenland ice cap remained locked in the Arctic wilderness today as the young scientist, alive and well, trekked over the snow toward Angmassalik with the sledge party that rescued him.

Courtauld, son of a millionaire British manufacturer, was found by a party under Hubert G. Watkins, leader of the British Arctic air route expedition, in or near the little hut where he had been marooned since last December.

News of his rescue was broadcast to the world by Captain Albin Ahrenberg, noted Swedish flier, who journeyed to Greenland from Sweden by plane to aid in snatching the young meteorologist from what appeared for a while to be almost certain death.

The Swedish airman, seeking the missing man, last sighted the rescue party a few miles from Courtauld's hut. He dropped sufficient food to enable the party to reach Angmassalik in safety and then radioed news of the rescue.

FILM WIFE FOR TRIAL WEDDING

Los Angeles, May 8 (AP)—Mrs. Peggy Hyde Von Eltz, known on the screen as Margaret Abbott, has defended in Superior Court her belief in trial marriage for "mature well-balanced persons."

Mrs. Von Eltz was called yesterday in a hearing at which her husband, Theodore Von Eltz, film actor, asked custody of their children, Lori, 8, and Theodore, 6, who were awarded her under an interlocutory decree of divorce.

"I made a mistake when I married Theodore" she said. "Certainly I do not advocate trial marriage. Everyone couldn't be trusted to make the test as a matter of principle. I can answer only for myself. I am hoping in saying that is the only way I can find happiness.

"Young persons should live according to convictions. Only a mature, well-balanced person should make his own rules of life."

BABE RUTH AS I KNOW HIM

FROM REFORM SCHOOL TO NATIONAL IDOL

By Michael H. Crowley

Supt. of Boston Police

Copyright, 1931, Boston Evening American.

Next to the tribute constantly being paid to Babe Ruth by the youngsters of the land, I believe the best one was paid Babe not so long ago by Hughie Duffy.

Some of us were talking about baseball—the Babe and other stars of the present and past; general baseball—and Hughie remarked:

"I think Babe Ruth is the one

BABE RUTH

HUGHIE DUFFY

"I think Babe Ruth is the only man in baseball who has never made a wrong play."—Hughie Duffy.

man in baseball who has never made a wrong play."

Duffy meant, of course, on the ball field, for the Babe, at one time, was considerable of a handful to keep in shape, and for a time he certainly was a wild one.

But what man amongst us hasn't been wild at some time in our career? There are very few, I guess. Nothing malicious or terribly unlawful, of course. There is always a line to be drawn there.

However, when I recall the rock battles we used to stage with other kid gangs in South Boston when I was running with the old Bakers' Dozen, and the possible injuries and consequences of some of those battles with rocks—I sometimes get frightened. Still it was more fun to us in those days than it was to do any malicious harm to person or property.

And there were many in that old Bakers' Dozen who became famous persons, and all of them survived the exuberances of their boyhood to become citizens decidedly staid. For instance—myself. No one could visualize me now as once an enthusiastic rock thrower.

It was the same, in a way, with the Babe. His boyhood was not as untrammeled as was ours and when he did go on his own, thinking for himself, he had to let off a little steam, adjust himself to his own system of balancing and wear off the rough edges.

These necessities, coupled with his becoming a nationally-known and lauded baseball star, subjected to all the temptations confronting a worshipped hero, would have proved too much for nine out of ten men, but the Babe, it is my pride to say, has won out.

He was once a tremendous eater —naturally. He is a big man, as

BRIGHTON GIRL FOUND IN GAS FILLED ROOM

Found unconscious on the floor of her apartment in Brighton ave., with gas escaping from all the jets in the kitchen range, Viola Hayes, 26, was sent to St. Elizabeth's Hospital today. Doctors are fighting to save her.

Harry Spencer, janitor, entered the apartment with a pass key when other occupants complained that gas was leaking.

The girl had been living there about a week, and her neighbors knew nothing about her affairs or whether she had relatives here.

Officers of Sta ion 14 conveyed the girl to the hospital in a police ambulance, after Spencer called for help.

They returned to the apartment for the purpose fo identifying the victim and, after a search through the few effects she possessed, found the names and addresses of several men. They will be questioned today in an effort to learn if there was any motive for suicide.

A further search revealed two bottles partly filled with liquor.

VAUGHAN FACTS GOING TO ELY

The report of Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner on Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy in relation to the disappearance of Guy L. Vaughan, bank receiver, was completed today.

Because Governor Ely was at his home in Westfield, Warner declined to make the report public.

"In view of the fact that Governor Ely personally gave the order for the report I feel it my duty to personally deliver it to him," Warner said.

"It contains only the facts and no recommendations."

The report was ordered by Gov. Ely after a Middlesex county grand jury charged Guy with inefficiency.

Warner's report will contain the testimony of 11 witnesses including Frederick T. Bonner, temporary receiver for the five banks whose affairs Vaughan handled and of Assistant District Attorney Frank G. Volpe of Middlesex County, who presented evidence that resulted in three indictments against Vaughan.

Suffolk County grand jury will hear evidence Monday.

"TAKE A TIP"

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

Take a tip and when you buy for your summery excursions, be sure and remember that this summer girl is not going to be the summer girl of last year—and take note of the new gagets!

There are some mighty sprightly ones that dress a girl up.

Capes, of course—I told you so.. Every color, and growing more midget day by day, just as small as you can bear it and get your healthy form into it.

The newest is the sea-going. Mess-jackets, sailor jackets, and something looks like the old man o' war, with chrome-plate buttons to glorify it. And you must wear your knitted hat very much over one eyebrow.

That's another dodge this summer. Hats are growing weary of falling off the back. It won't be long now before they are ALL off the side-slipping—slipping. You wait and see.

Capes—chiffon, fur, taffets, cotton, satin. Easy to wear—and oh joy! which can be said of so few chic things—easy to MAKE.

Shoes are going sandal.

And the flowers and the purse, or the flowers and the wide kid belt must match! Just bits of ginger-bread that make a lady prettier than nature or a dressmaker did!

3 JAILED FOR A QUINCY BREAK

Three Neponset youths, said by police to be members of rival bands of burglars operating in Quincy, were sentenced to six months in the House of Correction in Quincy District Court today.

They are Andrew Ryan, 17; John L. Mahoney, 18, and Francis Earley, 18. All pleaded guilty to larceny in connection with the burglary of the home of William Grey in Montclair a week ago.

A fourth defendant in the case, William Halloran, 17, of Dorchester, was held in $10,00 on charges of breaking and entering in the night time and larceny.

The four youths and two juveniles, divided into two bands, chose the same night to plunder the Grey home, according to police, and engaged in a midnight battle over $118 worth of loot.

The bill goes back to the House for enactment and is expected to be on the Governor's desk by Tuesday.

FIVE AND TEN

Jenny Urges Jennifer to Try to Win the Attractive Berry Rhodes

By Fannie Hurst

Whose Novels Have Given Her a Reputation as One of the Foremost of Modern Writers.

(Copyright, 1931, by Fannie Hurst.)

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

THE CONSCIOUSNESS had long since begun to dawn upon Jenny, in whom the impulse to climb was an acquired, rather than an inherent characteristic, that she had started off, socially speaking, on the wrong foot.

The advent of the John G. Raricks, from out of the Middle West, had not been a planned campaign, for the reason that the need for strategy had simply not occurred to her until the propitious moment had passed and the house of Rarick had settled.

Subsequently her mistakes had been fast and successful. After the dust of the publicity attending the purchase by John G. Rarick of the famous Ficke mansion had been laid, Jenny, appalled by the lull, had snatched, with more nervousness than diplomacy, at old relationships, mostly families of wealth and no particular social position, whose migration from the Middle West had preceded theirs.

Not in the Swim

Thereafter, the Rariccks bobbed about in uneven waters, sometimes piding up to quite a social crest, but in an erratic, unstable way that was precarious, and then, just as likely as not, sliding down again into the valleys between the waves.

No gainsaying the fact that the Rariccks were invited to six houses outside the social register for every one within. Jenny's awareness of social-register discriminations did not even begin to dawn upon her until well after the move, when that dawn came up like thunder.

The time was not slow in coming when she was to encounter the difficulty of rounding up a formal dinner composed of the people she cams gradually to realize were the right ones, and when she was to scorch under such mortifications as sending out thirty-six invitations to the alleged right ones and have twenty-eight regrets come home to roost heavily upon her heart.

It was not exactly in the spirit of snubbing. The Rariccks were not sufficiently in the running for that. It was just that in settings where even great wealth required proper exploitation, the Rariccks had somehow not arrived right.

Clever Neighbors

What brought this home with sudden acuteness to Jenny was the fact that the Isaac Slocums, whose wealth and social connections back in the St. Louis days, when they were neighbors in Westmoreland Place, were comparatively negligible, had moved East considerably after the Rariccks, and were now moving in social circles which Jenny achieved only sporadically.

Betty Slocum's careful social sense had accomplished that. She had planned ahead. She had surveyed, and ended by employing, at a vast sum, the services of a woman of impeccable social position, whose chief financial resources flowed in bountifully in return for achieving a wedge for the socially ambitious.

There was no going back. The best that could be hoped for was less uneven sledding.

This mistake had rebounded most cruelly on Jennifer. Unconsciously Jenny had wasted heartburr on the futility of wishing that Jennifer and Avery had been born to her in reverse order. An eligible son, somehow, millions in his effing, would have accelerated social matters.

As it was, Jennifer, always popular, whirled nevertheless in three worlds. A Bohemian one which her set invaded in "slumming"

Every available seat and inch of standing room was taken when Clerk of Court George E. Kimball read the commission of Governor Ely appointing Prof. Burns.

Judge Burns is the youngest man ever appointed to a judgeship of the Superior Court in Massachusetts and is the first Boston College graduate ever inducted into this office.

PROFUSION OF FLOWERS

The esteem in which Judge Burns is held with attested, not only by the large crowd present at his induction and by the hundreds who could not gain admission to the fourth session of Suffolk Superior Court, where the ceremony took place, but also by the profusion of flowers.

Floral tributes from well-wishers all over the State were banked in the bar enclosure against the front of the judge's bench.

When the ceremony was performed Judges Marcus Morton, James J. Sisk and Joseph Wasserman were on the bench, in addition to Chief Justice Hall and the new appointee.

AMERICAN REUNITES MOTHER, DAUGHTER

MRS. ANDERSON — MRS. HOWARD HARTELL

Mrs. Ethel R. K. Anderson, of 14 Fenwick st., Somerville, will be happy this Mothers' Day for she has been reunited with her mother, as the result of her appeal for some news of her parent in last Saturday's issue of the Boston Evening American. Mother and daughter were separated three months after Mrs. Anderson's birth and although she has searched for her parent for years she was surprised to learn that her mother was living in the Back Bay all these years. They plan to make their home together. The mother is Mrs. Howard Hartell. She was twice married.

AMERICAN AIDS WOMAN TO FIND HER MOTHER

"Mothers' Day has always been a day of sorrow to me, but next Sunday, and every day from now on, will be days of nothing but extreme happiness for me," Mrs. Ethel R. K. Anderson, of 14 Fenwick st., Somerville, said today. "And I owe this happiness to the Boston Evening American," she added.

Mrs. Anderson, pretty 27-year-old matron, last Saturday appealed to the Boston Evening American to assist in finding her mother from whom she was separated three months after birth. She was boarded out after her parents separated.

Today she visited the office and announced she had located her mother through the story in Saturday's American and to prove her statement introduced her mother.

"Yes, I'm glad to know that she is safe and sound. I've spent years searching for her, hoping that some day I could hold her in my arms," she said.

The girl's mother was visiting friends at Jacksonville, Vt., when informed of her daughter's whereabouts by a friend, Miss Edith Kittrell.

"Think of it, my mother has been living right here in the Back Bay with Miss Kittrell since our separation, and I didn't know it," Mrs. Anderson remarked.

"I have learned a few things that I always wondered about. I often wondered whether or not I had any brothers or sisters. Mother informs me that I am the only child. She also tells me she is only 43 years old.

Mrs. Anderson did not locate her father, Fred C. Kidd, of Greenwood st., Malden Highlands, until 1929. The mother later married Howard Hartell, now deceased.

Four children selected from Chelsea's schools were taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital today to undergo throat operations at the expense of the city.

They were transported to the hospital in Mayor John J. Whalen's automobile in company of Miss Emily McQueeney, parochial district school nurse. They will remain in the hospital 24 hours after their operations and then be taken to their homes.

From five to nine pupils of Chelsea schools are given treatment at St. Elizabeth's every week, selection being made on the recommendation of school physicians.

Those who entered the hospital today are Dennis Stanislaus, 10; Yvonne Arsenault, 12; Joan Grayson, 10, and Raymond Grayson, 6.

HOLMAN'S ART FOR ATTLEBORO

The paintings of S. Frank Holman, American artist, who died in Paris in January, 1930, are on their way back to this country to be presented to his native city, Attleboro, it was disclosed today.

Holman's body, exhumed from its burial place near Paris, is also being brought to Attleboro. Body and paintings are aboard the steamer Patria, due in New York May 13, accompanied by Charles Holman-Black, baritone, brother of the artist.

Holman was a colorist whose technique had been highly praised by critics. His works include many watercolors, views of Venice, a copy of Sodoma's "Flagellation of Christ," a "Baigneuse," a portrait of the artist's mother, and a number of landscapes.

He was born in 1859 and inherited his artistic talent from his mother. At 19 he went to Paris and soon had a painting accepted by the salon. During the war he served as head interne in the Duchesse de Rohan's hospital.

'STRIP' BANDITS ELUDE POLICE

While state police conducted an extensive search today for a "pop-eyed" gunman and his companion, who forced William Robinson, of Weymouth, and a woman friend to disrobe in the woods at Easton, Robinson was still ill at his home from the shock of his experience.

Robinson's automobile has not been recovered and state troopers are seeking it from a description furnished by its owner and Chief Elisha Ellis of Easton.

"Pigeye," as police describe him, is sought for questioning in connection with this robbery and also the robbery of a girl in February in Easton and the firing of shots at a house and automobile in that vicinity yesterday.

Speculation continues as to the identity of the woman companion of Robinson, whom he was giving a ride to Brockton on his way home from a business trip to Attleboro.

Robinson said she was "Mrs. Marion Smith, 42, of Attleboro," but nobody of that name is known there, nor is any Mrs. Smith a jewelry shop forewoman, as Mrs. Robinson described her husband's companion.

Three Months for Back Bay Suspect

Lieut. Thomas Murray promptly stood up again.

"You are charged with being drunk at Everett. Are you guilty or not guilty?"

As Lieut. Murray was preparing to answer what he thought was a practical joke, a voice from the dock answered,

Ely Seeks to Extend Temporary Job Rule

Governor Ely sent a special message to the House today recommending legislation to extend for one year from May 15 the emergency civil service rule giving temporary laborers with dependents preference in the classified labor service.

78 INDICTED AT FEDERAL GRAND JURY SESSION

Majority of Defendants Accused of Violating Liquor Laws in the State

Following a session of two weeks, the federal grand jury today re ported three secret and 75 public indictments to Judge James A. Lowell in United States Court.

Most of the 78 indictments concern violations of the prohibition law in Boston and other parts of Massachusetts. After making its report the grand jury was excused until May 14.

Among the indictments was one against Richard F. Fiels of Everett, charged with operating a radio outfit without license in signalling to a rum ship.

Indictments for violations of the liquor laws included those against Waltham Lodge, 1018, Loyal Order of Moose, Inc; Szea Gills Associated and Gus Weston of Worcester; Gertrude L. Kelley and Arthur Reed, Boston; James H. Murphy and William Smith, Dedham; William H. Smith, Taunton; Louis Richmond, Cambridge; Carl J. Contunnon, Everett; Abram Brown, Chelsea; Thomas A. BILL CALLS FOR REVERSION TO CONVENTION

Return of Power to Bosses Seen if Measure, Staunchly Opposed, Is Passed

Whether Massachusetts will retain its hard-won and popular primary election law or revert to the old boss-ridden and discredited convention system of 20 years ago, with its hand-picked candidates for public office, will be decided in the House next Monday.

On that day the so-called pre- [illegible] sponsored by the legislative committee on [illegible] is sponsored chiefly by Chairman James L. Taylor of the Republican State Committee, who has been stumping the state for months in an effort to win support for the proposition.

SEE BREAK-DOWN

While the proponents claim the bill will not abolish or change the direct primary law itself, friends of the present direct system charge that once having turned back, it will be but a step to breaking down the present law entirely and taking from the people their privilege of choosing candidates without dictation.

Under the bill reported, delegates from the various cities and towns would endorse candidates for state- [illegible] ary would be held on the [illegible] day in April to elect these delegates to the pre-primary convention. One delegate would be chosen for the first 50 voters in each community and an additional delegate for every 1500 in the same place.

"PETS" WOULD WIN

It is estimated that there would be about 750 delegates to the Democratic pre-primary convention and around 765 to the Republican

Following the primary, the pre-primary party convention, composed of the delegates, would be held not later than June 15, at which time the party platform would be drawn up and candidates for state-wide office entered

The "pets" of the convention would get the endorsement, it is contended. Then they would file their acceptances with the secretary of state. Proxies in voting would not be permitted and withdrawals barred.

The hand-picked candidates would then go before the people with the convention label tied to them and with all the power of the party machine and financial backing behind them.

Candidates, unresponsive to the party manipulators, could, it is true, run against the favorite but his chances of getting the nomination would be practically nil. A poor man, it is figured, would stand no chance at all.

Those that have studied the situation declare without reservation that the proposed new system will again place the highest offices within the gift of the people "on the auction block."

Outside of the little group headed by Chairman Taylor of the Republican state committee, there appears to be an entire lack of pomp her demand for any tinkering with the system that is now working so satisfactorily, it is understood

And it is pointed out that in the few states where the proposed system was tried out, the people quickly discarded it.

BOSTON FLIER ESCAPES DEATH

Narado Coomaraswamy, 19, son of the curator of Indian Arts at the Museum of Fine Arts, and a passenger, narrowly escaped death last night at Brainard Field, Hartford, Conn., when his monoplane struck a high tension wire as he was making a landing.

Attaches at the airport were startled when a bright flash illuminated the airport, followed by the noise of the plane's contact with the ground

Coomaraswamy and his passenger scrambled out of the wreckage, unhurt, and today are making necessary repairs. The grounding of the wire extinguished the lights at the airport and caused lights in the city to fade.

The youthful flier, who made his first solo flight last October at Boston airport, was returning to Boston from Detroit and was landing at Hartford to spend the night. Advices received by his parents at their home in Beacon st. stateditha he would continue his trip soon.

OIL FARM STORY STIRS NILAND

The fight against the establishment of an oil farm in Revere grew in intensity today as Representative Thomas A. Niland vigorously denied that he was fighting the project as an agent of the Standard Oil Company

Police were called to a meeting in Hiberman Hall, Revere, last night after Niland offered to fight a heckler who accused him of being in the employ of the corporation

"This story is ridiculous," Niland said today. "Anyone who knows my public record knows that I have fought the Standard Oil Co. successfully for 10 years.

"I was instrumental in defeating the company in litigation before the late Fire Marshal George C. Neale, before Commissioner of Public Safety Foote, and finally before the Supreme Court.

"Tonight in public meetings in Beachmont and East Boston I shall repeat my protests against the erection of tanks in Revere. At both places I will be glad to answer any questions regarding my opposition to the oil farm."

Niland intimated that he would name at tonight's meetings city officials aiding the oil farm project.

I. A. R. WYLIE SIGNED BY RADIO PICTURES TO WRITE ORIGINALS

'The Last Virtue' Will Be Novelist's First Under Her New Contract

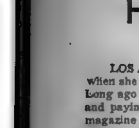
By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, May 8—There is one person I want to meet when she reaches Hollywood, and that is I. A. R. Wylie, novelist. Long ago in the days when I was buying scenarios for Essanay and paying all of $25 for a story, I. A. R. Wylie was writing magazine romances.

She and I had an extensive correspondence when I tried to buy some of her stories for $25. But even then Miss Wylie came high and we only arranged one deal.

She will write originals for Radio Pictures when she gets here in July from England. Her first is tentatively titled "The Last Virtue." She will also do the dialogue and continuity.



Louella O. Parsons

Radio expects now that it will star Jill Esmond Moore, or, pardon me, Jill Esmond, as she is now called on the screen.

THE HAPPIEST young man I have seen in a long time is Charlie Farrell. He and Virginia Valli, in the first stage of their honeymoon, are just as delighted over married life as if they were Mary Smith and Tom Jones. Charlie has been looking over stories since his return from his honeymoon and, according to private information, he is to play opposite Janet Gaynor in "Sonny Jane," by Paul Armstrong. Raoul Walsh will direct. That ought to be a mighty interesting picture in the talkies. One thing, the fans will be happy for they are still asking for Janet and Charlie. Marriage or no marriage, Janet and Charlie are still the ideal lovers of the screen.

HAPPENINGS IN Hollywood gathered in our travels put Fred Niblo at the MGM-Culver lot where he will direct "The Iron Chalice" with Dorothy Sebastian and William Boyd in the leading roles. Fred seems to be doing mighty well since he started to free-lance. Often that is the solution to an actor or director's troubles. June Clyde or, if you prefer, Mrs. Thornton Freeland, Nina Quarero and Ford Stanley complete the cast for "Arizona." They have all gone to Palm Springs on location. Must be pretty hot in Palm Springs this time of year. Edmund Breese has been signed for an important part in Richard Dix's picture, "The Reckoner."

SNAPSHOTS OF Hollywood collected at random: MRS. LAWRENCE TIBBETT wearing dark glasses, lunching with CARMEL MYERS. ALICE GLAZER and MOLLY MERRICK at the Embassy. ANN HARDING reading a play to her husband, HAROLD BANNISTER, at luncheon at the same place. ROLAND YOUNG and his wife getting ready to sail for Europe, June 30. EDDIE CANTOR and THOMAS MEIGHAN lunching at Al Levy's tavern. EDDIE LAMBERT staging a benefit at B. B. B.'s cellar Thursday night. MRS. GEORGE ARCHAINBAUD entertaining eight guests at dinner. MRS. SAMUEL GOLDWYN buying furniture for her new house in Santa Monica. HARRIET SHELLENBERGER aiding her. HAROLD GRIEVE giving the same assistance to EDMUND LOWE and LILYAN TASHMAN at Malibu. J. M. KERRIGAN, famous Irish actor, buying antiques from the Tennants at the Hall of Arts. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Reception to Winston Planned

Plans are under way for a reception and dinner on Wednesday evening, May 27, at the Copley-Plaza, in honor of Charles L. Winston, New England division manager for the RKO theaters, who returns to Boston soon and to his desk after a five months' illness.

A general committee of 100, selected from theater and motion picture circles, is headed by Joseph R. Brennan as chairman, with the assistance of James J. McGuinness of the Allied Theaters of New England and Al Somerby. The honorary committee includes Gov. Joseph B. Ely, Mayor James M. Curley, Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley, Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin, Senator Gaspar G. Bacon, Building Commissioner Theodore Rosmar, former Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry, ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, James H. Brennan and Judge Walter S. Collins.

Mr. Winston has for more than 20 years been prominently identified with the theatrical field in New England. He began his career as a reporter on the Boston Post, was on the staff of other local papers and became press agent for Keith's National Theater. His career has been a brilliant record of achievement. A Boston boy, his success has been attributed to his fine capacity for friendship and loyalty and his untiring devotion to his job.

Five months ago Mr. Winston underwent a series of operations as a result of a nervous breakdown, and the dinner and reception have been planned by his many friends as a welcome and a testimonial.

"Lady Alice's Pets" on the Bowdoin Stage

There is a clever and entertaining vaudeville act at the popular Bowdoin Sq., known as "Lady Alice's Pets." It is a bird and animal novelty that is winning favor both from the grown-ups as well as the young folks. The birds and the pigeons perform a number of difficult stunts.

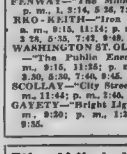
Film Who's Who

Jean Harlow, who appears in "Iron Man," opening at RKO Keith's today, is the 19-year-old girl who was lifted to screen prominence almost overnight as a result of her first picture, "Hell's Angels." Miss Harlow went to Hollywood over a year ago after graduating from Ferry Hall, a girls' school at Lake Forest, Ill. After attracting the attention of Hal Roach, comedy producer, she was tested for the leading feminine role in "Hell's Angels" and got it.



Jean Harlow

Cyna Davis, a recent graduate and now appearing in the cast. Miss Davis' first appearances behind the footlights were as a student in the university dramatic classes. She is a Boston girl, the daughter of Frank Hook-alo, for many years prominently identified in theatrical circles in Boston, and at the present time divisional manager for the Publix Theaters.

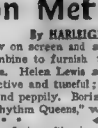
Clara Bow Registers Big as Molly in "Kick In" on Met Screen

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Clara Bow on screen and a very entertaining and colorful stage bill, combine to furnish the lure for the Metropolitan's change of fare. Helen Lewis and her musical maids prove to be both attractive and tuneful; they put their act over in tip-top manner, and peppily. Boris Petroff comes to the fore this week with "Rhythm Queens," which is fine entertainment.

* * *

"Kick In," the feature film, is better than its title, which is a misnomer. It is a crime story, and makes a fair program picture, for the audience gets a "kick" out of it, as is denoted by numerous laughs that sweep the house. Some come in serious passages, but what's the odds? They ARE laughs legitimately such, and it is always better psychology to laugh heartily than to be sighing regretfully. The plot twines about the lives of Regis Toomey, ex-convict, and his wife, Miss Bow. The villain of reputation still pursues him even when he is making good in the world; his special foe is Paul Hurst as a sort of boob Javert. Toomey is linked up with a robbery committed by one of his former pals, to whom the ex-prisoner is indebted for friendly favors. Tha wife has a drug addict brother, the role of Leslie Fenton.



Clara Bow

Director Richard Wallace makes the most out of the story; some of the sequences have a real grip. His cameras tell the tale with smoothness, and speak eloquently through the eye during silent passages. "Kick In" is Miss Bow's best film; she does some acting, and in the last half of the photoplay both her nature and her voice register well. She shows commendable restraint, and really rings the bell in her appeal to the police commissioner on her husband's behalf. Toomey is satisfactory. It is Fenton who "steals" the picture; he turns in a striking characterization, thoroughly convincing, again proving he ought to be given more jobs in films than he gets. Hurst and Wade Boteler are both good as detectives.

Exeter Theater

Ralph Forbes and Loretta Young in "Beau Ideal" and Mary Astor in "Behind Office Doors" are the attractions at the Exeter for the remainder of the week.

B. U. Grad in Copley Hit

The audience at "Compromising Anne," breezy farce at the Copley, tonight will hold several hundred members and graduates of Boston University, who will attend the performance as a tribute to Miss Cyna Davis, a recent graduate and now appearing in the cast. Miss Davis' first appearances behind the footlights were as a student in the university dramatic classes. She is a Boston girl, the daughter of Frank Hook-alo, for many years prominently identified in theatrical circles in Boston, and at the present time divisional manager for the Publix Theaters.

"Doc" Hits High Cost of Gowns

Dr. Rockwell

Dr. Rockwell, the "Old Doc" himself, who is heading the RKO maudeville bill at the Keith-Boston for tomorrow, has a lament. Lament is probably too mild a word for the doctor of button fits a strenuous objection to the high cost of evening gowns. If a thinks he is the only man in all the wide world who is compelled to buy 16 evening gowns each and every week, and he is quite positive in his belief, that his is the only case an evening gown is worn but once and then for less than 15 minutes.

When Dr. Rockwell decided upon a return to vaudeville he began building himself a new act. One of the comedy bits consists of cutting a gown off of a woman's back. This has proved to be one of the funniest bits of business ever seen on the stage.

Hopping Hither and Yon on Sport's Map

BOXING, the Sick man of Sport, is beginning to sit up and take notice. It hasn't thrown the pills out of the window and booted the Doctor out of the door yet, but the pallor is leaving pugilism's cheeks and the game is beginning to ask nursie what has she got for breakfast. Greedy managers are coming down off their high horses. They are giving matchmakers a chance to make matches that are matches and promoters to put on real, honest-to-goodness, cockle-of-the-heart warming shindies instead of the hippodromes and setups the get-rich-quick mob, which don't give a hoot in Helena for the good of the game or the perpetuation of the sport, backed the matchmakers into the corner with and insisted on inflicting on the suffering public. No wonder the fans and fannies turned to the ponderous wrestling pachyderms and the game of Grunt, Groan and Grimace for their entertainment. In many of the hippodromes put on in the name of boxing the last few years there was more clinching and mauling than in a whole parcel of mat bouts and more hugging and necking than at a high school picnic.

The wind has changed and is beginning to blow in the right direction. The Brouillard- Mello and the Maloney-Schaaf matches are two fistic straws which show the way the boxing breezes are blowing. Each of these is what in pugilistic parlance is known as a "natural." The southpaw duel between the French-Canadian from Worcester and the Portugee from Lowell will furnish a bona-fide welterweight New England champion. Matchmakers have been trying to match Maloney and Schaaf for the last two years. Good things are worth waiting for.

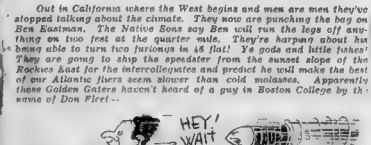
It was bound to come. Those whiskers of Sergei Kalmikoff—you've seen them in the Boston Garden—offered too inviting a mark. Every time he wrestled here we were looking for some opponent to reach up and pull out a bunch of spinach. The inevitable happened in Newark the other night.' George Hula yanked out a handful. Sergei emitted an agonized bellow that sounded like a cross between a steam calliope with the whooping cough and a love sick hippo calling to its mate. Hula was disqualified. He should have been crowned with the laurel wreath. Or should we say some aged eggs?

The alfalfa patch on Sergei's chin
Isn't sprouting any more—
An acre stitched by Georgie's fin—
Hark to Sergei roar!

BACK TO boxing. It is up to Brouillard, Mello, Maloney and Schaaf and those other boxers who will appear in coming shows not to allow the Sick Man of Sport to suffer a relapse. Larruping Lou and Annihilating Al, Dan Carroll's meal ticket and Johnny Buckley's blonde, can make or break boxing here this summer. If the two coming Garden carnivals of sweat furnish the proper brand of pugilistic pyrotechnics the turnstiles will click like batteries of rapid-fire guns at other shows here this summer. If either the Brouillard-Mello or Maloney-Schaaf shindigs are binders it will toll the bell for lovely Neil, for boxing will be deader than Dempsey's love for Estelle.

If Lou and Al should not behave,
And Maloney-Schaaf prove a "barney,"
Put "Rest in Peace" over Boxing's grave,
On the mound plant a rose of Killarney!

Out in California where the West begins and men are men they've stopped talking about the climate. They now are punching the bag on Ben Eastman. The Native Sons say Ben will run the legs off anything on two feet at the quarter mile. They're harping about his being able to turn two furlongs in 46 flat! Ye gods and little fishes! They are going to ship the speedster from the sunset slope of the Rockies East for the intercollegiates and predict he will make the best of our Atlantic fliers seem slower than cold molasses. Apparently those Golden Gaters haven't heard of a guy in Boston College by the name of Don Flerl—



In Boston Town we've a flier so Fleet
He runs a rabbit right off its feet.
And makes a bid to say, "Hey! By Ge!
Hold on a minute! Please wait for me!"

SHAME ON you, Judge Fuchs, for shipping our Charlie Wilson down the river to Rochester . . . He was making good with a bang on the difficult corner. The fans wanted you to keep him there . . . But Heh! Heh!—you couldn't keep Joe Cashman from scoring a beat for the Boston Evening American on it, could you, Judge? . . . Speaking of the baseball slaves . . . They're about ready to sell the whole Cincinnati club. The Reds, who open here tomorrow, still will be under the ownership of Sidney Weil. But any day now you are likely to hear that Jack Hendricks, who used to manage the Reds, or some one else, has bought the club.

You can't blame Dan Howley for failure to rebuild the Reds any more than you can blame Shano Collins for not making pennant winners out of the Red Sox. Even a Napoleon cannot rebuild with inferior material.

MRS. JULES MASTBAUM, widow of the late Philadelphia financier, is hinted as being the financial backer of the Sharkey-Carnera fight. . . . Bayard Tuckerman warns us not to forget the Eastern Horse Club meeting at Rockingham Park . . . John Igoe is spinning about town in a new gasoline buggy . . . Tip O'Neill of the YD Motors is about the wildest b.b. fanatic of 'em all . . . N. Y. may make Benny Leonard a referee . . . Jack Dempsey wants the winner of the Maloney-Schaaf bout to come to Reno and fight Paolino 25 rounds . . . They are more likely to box 10 rounds in Boston. Jack Quinn was asked if he was an octogenarian . . . "No," he replied, "I'm a spitballer!" . . . Au revoir.

OFF THE GRIDIRON INTO THE MAZUMA

LAWYER SAYS SHARKEY GO ILLEGAL

New York, May 8 (AP)—Federal Judge John Knox today heard arguments on the suit for an injunction brought by the Madison Sq. Garden of Illinois to prevent Primo Carnera from fighting Jack Sharkey before he carried out a contract with it, ordered briefs to be filed and adjourned the action.

Judge Knox gave Carnera until Monday to file an answer to affidavits filed by the Garden today in support of its claim and indicated he would make a decision on the case some time next week.

George W. Whiteside, counsel for the Garden, argued that the Garden had Carnera signed to a legal contract, one provision of which he would break by fighting Sharkey June 10. The argument of Carnera's lawyer, George Sylvester, was that Carnera would be committing an illegal act by meeting the winner of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling fight, since both those boxers were under suspension in New York state, and that therefore the contract itself was illegal.

The illegal act, Sylvester said, would be the breaking of a rule of the New York Athletic Commission, a rule which, he said, had all the weight of law under the act of the Legislature creating the commission.

Judge Knox inquired if it was not true that Carnera was under suspension himself when he signed the contract.

Sylvester admitted that it was, but that he had since been reinstated and therefore could not now fight a suspended boxer without breaking the law.

"From what I read in the papers," Judge Knox remarked, "it appears the New York State Athletic Commission suspends and reinstates fighters as well."

Sylvester protested that remark and said the commission always had a reason for suspending a boxer.

Judge Knox also presided at the trial of the suit several years ago by Jack Dempsey for an accounting.

George W. Whiteside, for the Garden, made the first argument. He

'Twixt Tee and Cup

—By BILL GRIMES—

There was a pronounced Crimson tinge to the two-day Woodland four ball best ball tournament, for four of the five low scoring teams were composed of Harvard men.

Milan Heath and Dick Kimbrough, two Harvard sophomores tied with Steve Sleeper, a classmate of theirs, and A. V. Ellis, a former Cantabrigian, with a better ball of 70 while Phil Finley and Bill Arnold, who are seniors wound up with a 71 gross, which put them on even terms with Jim Baldwin and Charlie Eaton.

Judging from the results of the Woodland event, Burt Nicoll, the Belmont Spring professional, has proven himself a worthwhile coach for the Crimson varsity.

The successful round turned in by "Jock" Heath and Dick Kimbrough, who, by the way, is from Muncie Ind., may result in their making regular berths on the Harvard varsity team.

Frank Rapp made a beautiful try to sink a long putt on the 19th green at Woodland yesterday, which, if it had dropped would have tied he and his partner, Frank Craven, with the lead-rs.

For the first time since the final match of the 1928 season, when she fell before Miss Ruth Batchelder, at the Dedham Country & Polo Club Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., was beaten in a team match yesterday. Mrs. Henri F. Prunaret, Jr., accomplished the feat at Belmont Spring, winning by a two up margin.

Until halted by Mrs. Prunaret who, incidentally, was forced to shoot an 84 to win, Mrs. Baker had won 26 consecutive W. G. A. team match tilts, which is a record that will li-e for many years.

Mrs. S D Waxman, a former W. G. A. champion, is now located in New York, and has retired from competitive golf

Eddie Lowery and Elmer Ward who won the Woodland open last year with a better ball of 67, were unable to play this season.

W. C. Weidig teamed up with his son at Woodland, and their net better ball was 73, for the youngster, who carries a 24 handicap, used many of his strokes to reduce their score.

THREE WHITNEY HORSES IN THE PREAKNESS

Baltimore, May 8 (AP)—Nine of the country's ranking three-year-olds today were named to answer the bugle call in the 58th renewal of the Preakness, over the Pimlico track tomorrow.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable heads the list with three of her stars—Twenty Grand, Surf Board and Anchors Aweigh—but probably only two will go to the post. If the track is muddy, and it was good and heavy today, Twenty Grand and Anchors Aweigh are slated to carry the Greentree silks, but if it is fast, then Surf Board probably will replace Anchors Aweigh.

C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, which can run on either a dry or heavy course, probably will be the second choice, although A. G. Bostwick's Mate is sure to get plenty of backing if the going is tough.

Other entries are the Seagram Stable's Soil Gills, Morton L. Schwartz' Cinck Tower, Walter M. Jeffords' Aegis and Walter Salmon's Ladder

Good Excuse Found for Colleges

—By MYLES T. McSWEENEY—

College men are getting smart, in spite of their education.

They are learning that a flying tackle has more cash value than a degree.

And that a good toe hold is better than a phi beta kappa key.

Ten years from now, a man without cauliflower ears will have a hard time convincing anyone he went to college.

Up to date colleges will have to revise their courses.

They must have a course in animal noises and how to make them. Something every wrestler should know.

And a course in face making. Essential.

More collegiate wrestlers will mean fewer lawyers. That will be a help.

And fewer bond salesmen. Better still.

NO HOPE FOR U. S. IN CUP PLAY—TILDEN

New York, May 8 (US)—William T. Tilden, 2d, the most famous tennis player of them all, had three things of some importance to say on his return from a continental tour with Karel Kozeluh.

"Mrs. Helen Wills Moody will probably be seen in professional ranks after, and if, she ever signs a motion picture contract."

"America certainly will not win the Davis Cup this year."

"If negotiations with Gerald Patterson (former Australian International) materialize, the biggest professional venture in history—a world-wide tour lasting 18 months—will be undertaken."

Tilden was interviewed at the Hotel Algonquin here, amazingly buoyant, he had just detrained from Montreal. He meets Vincent Richards at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night

"Shields and Wood need stern single competition. Give it to them and we'll get the Davis Cup eventually, but not in 1931. Not with Cochet and Jean Borotra around.

CALLAHAN SUES ARGONNE CLUB

Andy Callahan of Boston and Lawrence, professional boxer, has brought three suits of $2500 each in the superior court, two against the Argonne Athletic Association Inc., and one against Edward B McManus, known as Eddie Mack, to recover compensation for bouts that were not held.

His suit against the corporation is to recover for a bout he says was scheduled for April 10, 1930, with Billy Wallace of Cleveland, Ohio and he sues both the corporation and Mack for a bout he says was scheduled for April 29 1930, with Johnny Farr of Cleveland.

The plaintiff says the defendants failed to conduct the contests after agreements in writing had been made, or to pay him anything for his trouble in preparing for the bouts

Halaiko to Try for Kayo Over Renault

Steve Halaiko of Buffalo, who punched his way to fame in amateur boxing championships here, says he will stop Baby Jack Renault in their 10-round bout at the Argonne A. A.'s opening outdoor boxing show at Braves Field on next Tuesday night. Since joining the pro ranks, Halaiko has beaten some of the best of the lightweights. Sammy Mandell, former champion, is numbered among his victims.

Sammy Bruce of Buffalo will have Johnny Indrisano of East Boston in another 10-round contest

Public Links in Fellsway Sought

Residents of Malden, Medford and Everett who play golf can look forward in the near future to a public links to meet their needs. The House Ways and Means committee yesterday advocated the expenditure of $200,000 for the construction of an 18-hole course in the Middlesex Fells reservation.

Holy Cross Finishes Spring Grid Work

Worcester, May 8—Holy Cross closed three weeks of spring football practice yesterday. Although Capt-elect Phil O'Connell and many of the other regulars who will be available this fall have been busy with other sports, baseball and track, a squad of 35 candidates has engaged in the drills

BRILL TO COACH AT COLUMBIA

New York, May 8 (INS)—Martin Brill, famous Notre Dame halfback of the last two seasons, will be one of Coach Lou Little's assistants at Columbia University next fall, it was announced today. His title will be that of assistant backfield coach.

Discussing Brill's appointment, Coach Little said

"He was engaged mainly because we believe he can show Columbia halfbacks how to do the most important things that a back must know—to block, and to tackle. It was in those two departments that Columbia halfbacks were most deficient last year."

Morton Kaer Signs to Play Pro Football

New York May 8 (AP)—Morton Kaer, All-America halfback at Southern California in 1926, has been signed by the New York Giants professional football team as field captain.

Kaer will take the place of Benny Friedman, who has retired from professional play to coach the Yale backfield and trade stocks on the New York Curb Exchange.

Ticknor Will Fill in for Devens

Because Charlie Devens is no longer eligible to pitch for Harvard, Ben Ticknor may be shifted from left field into the Harvard pitching box.

Devens' demise leaves only Red MacHale and Lefty Page on the Crimson mound roster, and Coach Mitchell would hardly try to go through the balance of the season with just these two.

Ben Ticknor has been tentatively on the Harvard pitching staff for the past two years and may fill the breach left by Devens

Shortstop Has Whiskers Mowed; Gets Better Job

Fairmont, W Va., May 8 (AP)—They cut Mike Gorzan's long black whiskers off today and he joined the Fairmont club of the Middle Atlantic League.

Manager Walsh of the Fairmont team was so impressed with the House of David shortstop in an exhibition game here that he made Gordon an offer, the shave and haircut, of course, being among the stipulations.

Roslindale Nine to Open Season Sunday

Roslindale Twi Team, champions of the Boston Twi League, will open its season Sunday at Fallon Field, Roslindale, playing the strong Newton Team, champions of the Hub Twi League.

Al Weston and Neil Mahoney will play for the Newton Team.

Millenium Near; Gabby Street Whispers at Umps

Pittsburgh, May 8 (AP)—Manager Gabby Street of the St. Louis Cardinals is afraid the umpires might get the idea he is losing his grip. Gabby recently has been suffering from an abscessed ear. Cotton packing interfered with his hearing and when he whispered he thought he was shouting. But now he removes the cotton before each game so he can tell just how loud he is talking.

"Sure would have been a joke on me if I'd have whispered and thought I was yelling," Gabby explained. "Yes, the umpires would have thought the millenium was approaching."

HONESTY IS COSTLY POLICY IN BIG LEAGUES

GAME IS KEPT ON LEVEL AT LOSS

By JOE CASHMAN

Every season some big league club is wrecked at the very start by the schedule.

This season's victim is Cincinnati, which will open a four-game series with the Braves at the Wig wam tomorrow

The Reds, weak sisters of the National League's western group have been battling constantly since the campaign started against the champion St. Louis Cardinals, the powerful Chicago Cubs and the dangerous Pittsburgh Pirates.

As a result, the Bowlesmen have but two wins in 17 starts to their credit, and though the season is less than a month old, they are already deep in the cellar, with very little chance of ever getting out.

Cincinnati fans are all "het up" over the situation.

They insist that it isn't fair to handicap a weak club so early by forcing it to meet the strongest opposition in the circuit.

The sensible thing to do, they assert, would be to send the strong against the strong and the weak against the weak for the first month so as to get all eight clubs fairly well bunched and give all the fans something to cheer About for a few weeks, at least.

Sox and Braves Have Often Been "Goats"

Boston customers appreciate how the Reds' rooters feel. Our two local clubs have often been schedule as "goats."

Still, there's little, if anything that can be done to avoid such plights as the Reds now find themselves in.

The club, no doubt, isn't as weak as such strong rivals as the Cards, Cubs and Pirates have made it appear and it probably would have made a much better showing than it has to date if it could have played a series or two with the Robins or Phils. But there is nothing certain about it.

Then again, it would be impossible for anybody to correctly predict which would be the strong clubs and which would be the weak when the schedule is drawn up in mid-winter.

And even if such a feat were possible, it would be against all major league principles to book games in such a way as to create any artificial enthusiasm. Bigtits like that just aren't pulled in big league baseball.

Magnates Keeping Game Strictly on the Level

The magnates, if they desired, probably could make both circuits better balanced and profit plenty by the arrangement, but they don't because they are determined to keep the sport honest and strictly on the level. They would never consider drawing up a schedule to help any club.

No team in either league gets any breaks except those it makes for itself. Every club plays every rival 22 times. If any profit by the time when the contests are played, well and good. If any are eliminated from the race for the same reason. It is just too bad.

That's the fair way and that's the right way.

CARNERA MUST ANSWER GARDEN

pointed out that the Garden had signed Carnera to fight the winner of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling bout, to be held in Cleveland July 3, the contract forbidding Carnera to engage in any fights with a "major opponent" before meeting the winner of the Cleveland bout.

Whiteside pointed out that considerable expense had been entailed by the Illinois Corporation, and its parent, the Madison Square Garden Corporation of New York, in seeking an opponent for Schmeling.

The list of contenders, he said finally had dwindled down to Stribling and Carnera, then added:

"Sharkey may be considered in that by some mistake his position has been clouded by foul work."

Among those in court as the hearing opened were William F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden of New York, William Saxe, a New York lawyer, president of the Madison Square Garden of Illinois, Humbert Fugazy and Jimmy Johnston, co-promoters of the Schmeling-Sharkey fight and other interested parties of both sides.

Putting.

In putting it is essential to be well anchored in a comfortable position.

After getting a smooth stroke with an easy follow through (for distance putting) it is just a matter of practice and getting the proper line.

There are however, really two types of putting, one for short distances, the other for anything beyond 10 or 12 feet.

The short putt is more of a tap-stroke, but it should be made nevertheless with a smooth motion, using the wrists only and with the arms well anchored to the sides or the hips.

I have a habit myself of anchoring my right elbow to the side to gain steadiness

The long putt is a swing. For accuracy I usually try to pick a spot eight or 10 feet from my ball, using this spot as a direction guide. Any golfer will find this is a big help in keeping to the proper line.

Putting is at least 50 per cent psychology. Some days the hole looks as big as a barrel, from almost any part of the green; probably because the player happens to roll in a long one at the start or get a few close enough so that he acquires early confidence.

I see good players as well as duffers tighten up on the greens, making sabs at the ball, when all they need to do is take a good breath and relax.

Too much time spent on the putting practice greens is as bad as none at all

Tournament players make a mistake by indulging in putting practice before play starts. Anyone who hasn't his putting touch by the time a tournament comes along won't find it on the practice greens.

Tomorrow—Take the Penalty.

CLOSE FIGHT FOR W. G. A. CROWN

By BILL GRIMES

Under ordinary circumstances it would be safe to predict that the Southern District had clinched its first W. G. A. team match championship, for the present leaders are two matches out in front with only three more to play.

But anything is liable to happen in a championship in which women are participating and, therefore, until such a time as it is mathematically impossible for either C ntral or Nor hern to overtake Southern, it will be advisable to withhold the congratulations.

With seven matches entered in the records, Southern has won six and Central and Northern have met with two reverses.

Unquestionably, the Southern District has been the class of the association this season. But, with matches still to be played against Central and Northern, the 1931 W. G. A. team match race is by no means over.

Tilden-Richards Match to Go on Air

New York, May 8 (INS)—The tennis match between William Tilden and Vincent Richards for the professional championship on Saturday will be broadcast from Madison Square Garden by the Columbia IABC network it was announced today.

Chi Fans Miss Return of Joe McCarthy

Chicago, May 8 (INS)—Chicago fans were unable to witness the return of Joe McCarthy with the New York Yankees today, due to the postponement of the game between the Yankees and the White Sox because of wet grounds and cold weather.

DAMON RUNYON Says

New York, May 8—Mr. Joseph E. Widener, that tall, urbane, magnificently groomed gent who is one of the big guns of New York racing, and chief owner of the Hialeah track at Miami, I having quite a tussle trying to get his favorite pastime legalized in Florida.

He wants pari-mutuels there it recently addressed the Florida legislators on the subject and gave the boys quite an earful. I will say one thing for Mr. Widener—he is an outspoken man. He doesn't try to disguise his meaning or his purpose

HIALEAH ILLEGAL

"I am honored with having operated the Hialeah race course for three years, we might say illegally, because racing there has never been recognized under our government or controlled as it should be," said Mr. Widener, blandly.

And later on:

"It is human nature to bet, and when you congregate five or more thousand people on a race course or at any game of chance, it is foolish to think they won't bet."

"Why not control that system (betting), recognize it, and let the state have a brokerage fee for it?" asked Mr. Widener. "That is all the pari-mutuel is, a brokerage system.

"So far as that goes, in the dealings in stock outside of the investment business, what is the business of ordering stocks except gambling in short sales and long sales, on the credit of securities, and the opinion of people as to whether or not the stocks are going higher or lower?

SAYS BETTING O. K.

"Why should there be any objection to taking commissions on that, where there is a brokerage of 6 or 7, or 8 or 10 per cent on the betting of a horse to win this or that race?"

To be sure, Mr. Widener get in a few of the stock plugs for racing as entertainment to prevent the tourists sliding on through Florida to Cuba, as improving the breed of horses, and as producing an investment by himself and associates of upward of $1,000,000 in beautiful Hialeah.

Back in Belmain he argued frankly for legalized betting on the ground that it would develop revenue for the State and because it can't be prevented if there is any racing, at all.

So there you are, boys

My Florida operatives seem some what pessimistic about the pari-mutuel chance of being legalized, but they did me cheer up just the same. They say a master mind has already evolved an idea that will result in the race tracks carrying on, regardless of what the Legislature does, and that there will be betting.

Maybe the sheriff has sent 'em word.

B. C. STUDENT TEACHES McKAY MAT LESSON

MORELLI IS WINNER IN ARENA BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

Al Morelli won from Pat McKay in their finish wrestling bout at the Arena by pulling a surprise move.

The youthful Boston College sensation had won the first fall with a flying tackle in 26m. 17s. Just prior to tipping McKay over with a fierce tackle, Morelli butted Pat in the stomach.

Jack Conway

This caused McKay to believe that Morelli would attempt to win the match in the same way. So when Al came roaring at him McKay placed his guard so as to protect his stomach. Instead of letting drive with a tackle, Morelli stepped in close, and with an inside crotch hold, lifted his opponent in the air and slammed him to the canvas. The time of this fall was 15m. 21s.

Morelli continues to improve with each bout. Give this youngster six months more schooling under Stanley Stasiuk and he will be able to lick many of the so-called front-line wrestlers.

In the early stages of the tussle, Morelli applied four successive headlocks. He sent McKay crashing to the canvas, but the latter came back fighting.

Pat attempted to rough things up with Al, but he found the former Maroon and Gold hero a capable citizen with his dukes. Morelli twice punched McKay through the ropes. On one occasion McKay landed in the lap of Jock Gray, Wollaston golf pro. Jock decided that golf and not catching wrestlers is his game.

Morelli at first experienced difficulty in nailing McKay with one of his tackles. Pat sidestepped cleverly and permitted Morelli to crash through space.

Al persisted in his attack and finally planted Pat's body on the mismatch. Pat was in poor condition when he regained his feet, and proved an easy victim for the deadly tackle.

McKay Is Knocked Out of the Ring

Morelli tried to end matters quickly with a flying tackle when wrestling was resumed, but failed. He then punished McKay with headlocks and twice knocked Pat out of the ring.

McKay took a count of eight outside the ropes. Once when Pat stood outside of the ropes refereeing to get back into action, Morelli hooked him with a headlock and sent him crashing to the mat, right in the center of the ring. It was a new trick in the wrestling game.

Morelli then shifted to flying tackles. As Pat looked for more tackles Al pulled a fine surprise move, winning the second fall and the match with an inside crotch hold and body slam.

Jim Maloney Does Some Training at Arena

Jim Maloney intended to be merely a spectator at the wrestling show, but when Stanley Stasiuk and Nick Libro carried their battle from the ring into the crowd Shamus stepped in between the big fellows. Stasiuk and Libro went in and out of the ring. The cops were kept busy maintaining order.

For 20 minutes the Libro and Lotus forgot they were wrestlers and punched it out. The decision was a draw.

Count Zarynoff won from Louis Loew, French heavyweight, in 19m. A top scissors gave the Count the victory.

It was later announced that Zarynoff has been signed to meet Gus Sonnenberg at the Arena on next Thursday night.

George Vassell defeated Axel Anderson in 9m. 21s. with an inside crotch, body lift and slam.

George McLeod won from John Mahoney in 7m. 24s. with a flying head scissors.

Kenny Kilroy and Jack Albright went 10 minutes to a draw.

Dick Weaver defeated Sam Slousky in 7m. 12s. with a flying tackle.

Class D League Planned

Jack Conway Adds Another to List of Winners

It's getting to be a habit with Jack Conway. He has picked 23 winners out of 24 bouts since the first of the year. He picked Al Morelli to defeat Pat McKay in the Arena wrestling bout at the Arena last night and, of course, Morelli won.

Conway's record for the year follows:

W	L	P. C.
22	1	.957

Babe Ruth as I Know Him

—By SUPT. CROWLEY—

active man—and I have no doubt that always in his mind will be the memory of the days as a ragamuffin in Baltimore, when his family, desperately poor, sometimes never knew where the next meal was coming from.

Ruth has overcome his appetite, he tells me, but he has merely mastered it—not overcome the fact that he is hungry.

"Hunger isn't so bad, though," he told me once, "when you know you have money enough to step in anywhere and eat anything on the menu. It's when you just haven't anything to eat and don't know how to get anything that the hunger is most intense."

Ruth's chief regret in life is that his mother did not live until his "money days," so that he could have installed her in luxury and ease in an attempt to make her former those lean days.

She did not live even to see Babe break the home-run record in 1919 however. She passed away six years earlier, when Ruth was still at St. Mary's Industrial School, with another year of school ahead of him.

He has spoken to me often of his mother, and I know that underneath that big, bluff exterior he has missed her greatly. By the great generosity he has shown even with persons who were almost strangers to him, he would have dazed her with the good things of life had she remained here for another 10 or a dozen years.

(Tomorrow Supt. Crowley will conclude his intimate narrative of his years of friendship with Babe Ruth.)

BATTLE ON FOR OLYMPIC TRYOUTS

Chicago, May 8 (AP)—A bitter fight over the scene of the final tryouts for places on the 1932 American Olympic track and field team today appeared certain, with Chicago and the Pacific Coast the combatants.

The trials originally were awarded to Soldier Field by the Olympia track and field committee, but Pacific coast leaders have contended that their section is the logical place for the event and have prepared to go to battle when the committee meets in Chicago May 16.

Chicago interests, headed by Avery Brundage, president of the Amateur Athletic Union and president of the American Olympic Association, are ready to fight to keep the trials here.

Brundage today issued a statement relative to the situation, in which he said:

"The selection of Chicago by the track and field committee was approved at a meeting of the American Olympic committee proper, over telegraphic protests from the Pacific coast. Both the vote of the track and field committee and the American Olympic committee were almost unanimous.

"Statements have been made on the Pacific coast that political influence was exerted within the organization to secure the trials for Chicago. As a matter of fact, the subject was not considered by the athletic interests in Chicago and the Chicago member of the track and field committee was not even present when the question was settled."

Somerville Cubs Beat Waltham Town Team

The Somerville Cubs defeated the Waltham Town Team before a crowd of 5000 by the score of 14 to 4 at Lincoln Park, Somerville, last evening. Home runs were made in the third inning by Murphy, Schultz and Genre.

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press

Earl Grace, Cubs—His long fly in 11th drove in Wilson with run that beat Reds 5-4.

Oscar Melillo, Browns—Clouted Cleveland pitching for triple and three singles, scoring three runs and driving in one.

John (Pepper) Martin, Cardinals—Accounted for six runs against Pirates with home run, double and two singles.

Vic Sorrell, Tigers—Scattered White Sox's nine hits and beat them 6-1.

Boston Evening American Baseball Album

CHARLES "BUSTER" CHATHAM.

Braves' infielder.

Born, West, Texas, December 25, 1903.

Height, 5 feet, 6 inches.

Weight, 158 pounds.

Broke in with Greenville in the East Texas League in 1924 as an outfielder and was purchased by Dallas into that season.

Dallas farmed him out to Springfield in the Three I League, where he played in '25 and '26.

The next two years he played with Kansas City and it was while there that he started to play the infield regularly.

In 1929 he was sent to Pueblo in the Western League and before the close of that season he was purchased by the Portland, Ore., club.

The Braves bought him from Portland last summer.

He always hit over .300 in the minors. His best mark was .356, made at Pueblo in '29, when he led the league in hitting.

In 112 games for the Braves last year he batted for .267, making 108 hits, including 20 doubles, 11 triples and five home runs.

He played both third base and shortstop, fielding .934 at the former position and .974 at the latter.

At present he is suffering from a cracked chook bone and will not be able to play for about a week.

He is married and lives in Waco, Tex.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The Red Sox open their first Western trip of the season this afternoon when they play the first of a four-game series with the league-leading Indians in Cleveland. It is Danny MacFayden's turn to pitch for the Fenway flock, while Mel Harder is due to take the hill for the pace-setters.

The only Sox regulars at the start of last season who still retain their berths on the club are Tom Oliver in center field and Hal Rhyne at shortstop. "Shano" Collins has certainly classed house since becoming manager, sending six of the 1930 varsity on their way and benching many others.

The passing of Russ Scarritt to the Senators means that Joe Cashe pilot feels that Al Van Camp and Gene Rye are plenty capable of taking care of left field. Rye may alternate, Van Camp playing against southpaws and Rye against right-handed flingers.

The most surprising club in either league today is the Chicago White Sox. Rated no better than a sixth-place outfit when the race started, the Windy City athletes have been in the first division from the beginning. This invasion of the wide open spaces by the Eastern clubs will show whether or no Donie Bush's crew has been playing over its head.

You can't keep a good man down. The Cards threatened all last summer to sell Jim Bottomley, veteran first sacker, down the river and after his disappointing show ng in the world's series, club official announced that if "Smiling Jim' was fortunate enough to be on the team this season, he would be a second string.

But Bottomley is still the regular initial sack guardian for the National League champions and what's more he's bad for second place among the leading hitters and is leading the circuit in doubles.

McGraw castoffs always seem to improve after leaving New York. Little Napoleon traded Wally Roettger to the Reds because he couldn't hit and here is that young flychaser leading the league with the stick with a mark of .400.

To get Roettger from the Cards last year, 'Mac' released George Fisher, who immediately became the hitting sensation of the circuit upon reaching St. Louis.

And the year previous, the Giants' pilot sent Lefty O'Doul to the Phils because he couldn't hit southpaw pitching and all O'Doul did with the Quakers was to win the batting championship.

FIVE AND TEN

parties"; an outer fringe one which represented wealth and perhaps a bit too much gayety and, far too occasionally, the one within the walls which the Sycamins had sealed by careful maneuver and which Jenny had mistakenly planned to hurdle by a running high-pump.

Poor Psychology

It was not. Jenny felt sure, that Rarick money could not have accomplished anything that Rarick money set out to do; it was that Rarick money had not taken its psychological moment.

These realizations began to marshal themselves into Jennifer's younger and more humble mind the first year that she was out of Miss Pratt's School for Girls. To begin with, Miss Pratt's School had been a mistake. The daughters of millionaires attended all right, but not the daughters of the socially-right millionaires. Jennifer kept a stiff and even an impudent upper lip about it all, but in the seclusion of talks with her mother those lips of hers could drag at the corners.

"Where do they get off, leaving us out? I wouldn't give a plugged nickel to go to the Monkton-Rock's cotillion I thought cotillions went out with hustles, anyhow. But what do you bet they don't forget Father's name on their Infantile Disease Hospital subscription list?"

"Let them get it!"

"Don't be silly, darling. You know perfectly well Leila Monkton has as good as got you down for five thousand."

Jennifer Explains

Jenny did. "Well, just the same," would go on Jennifer, her eyes were heavy from a sleepless night over this same case of nomination, "who can you expect? Your father never accepts an invitation of any sort. Position has nothing to do with approach us, the women of the family always either asking permission to bring another man or attending alone."

"Nonsense, mother! Look at the Sheltons. Does their old man ever show himself? Look at the Turpitzes. The face of the husband and father of that family has almost become extinct. Fewer and funnier husbands is the social set up of the hour. Bring your own gigolo. Don't kid yourself along, darling; that's not the reason we're sern."

In the inelegant parlance of her daughter, that was precisely what Jenny was doing, casting about within her troubled spirit for some sort of satisfactory explanation of a position that was hourly becoming more enigmatical to her.

"There's nothing mysterious about it, mother, we've treated the exact science of social climbing inexactly, that's all."

"But just the same, Jennifer, mumbo that we are living in people, with intellectual hurlips and no 'g's,' this is a country where money is supposed to buy everything."

"And so it does, if you know how to go about spending it. Money will buy anything from a plush horse to an Aubusson tapestry. You're out of luck if you go after the plush horse when Aubusson tapestries are the swanky buy."

Figuring It Out

"We should have employed a social, interior decorator to keep us from making mistakes such as cultivating plush horses, like the Ben Winans or the Maxfield Bonds. And that I would give one hundred Winans hair in order to crash into the Sycamore edition. But just the same, you've got to know your onions."

"Do you know, I sometimes think," said Jenny, contemplatively, and with the crinkled look of continuing to break her head for more satisfactory explanation, "that there's such a thing as being too nice? There is nothing more ghastly than the hunt on smile of trying to be too amiable."

"Perhaps, socially speaking, darling, we haven't got 'it.'"

"Nonsense!" said her mother, regarding her with tilted lids of admiration, "You have every kind of 'it.'"

"Oh, I get by in a crowd That is, if I can manage to catch enough. I'm so damned half baked! Even the desire in me to be something here, there or quite low in I am is half-baked or I'd go be it. I've not a brain mother."

"Use it, Jennifer," said her mother, regarding her through lids that were untilted now "On Berry Rhodes."

"In other words, the beautiful and reluctant daughter of wealth must jerk her family into social security by marrying the scion of a great family. What is a scion, anyway?"

"Berry is a person on his own; you've said so yourself. Why not come out and own you like him?"

"Why mother, you pain and surprise me!"

"You're not clever in the role of ingenue, darling. A little awful, in fact."

"Well, all right, if you insist. He's a bad boy, but I like him. God knows why, but I do."

"Leslie Edgerton hasn't asked you to her dance tonight because she loves you."

"Mother, you continue to pain and surprise me."

"Hurry get you asked there She must have thought it the better part of wisdom not to refuse."

All Off

"It's all off there!"

"Are you sure, Jennifer?"

"That's the devilish part. I'm not."

"Jennifer, there's one thing I must say for your father. He never played for small stakes in his life."

"There was all that talk that Leslie's trip to Europe was a trip to Brooklyn to have a babe—Berry's."

"You know that if that were true, it would have been marriage—girl at this point of the merciless Edgerton tongue'"

Berry's a queer, even we devil of a darling—sometimes. I don't know where I get off with him.

End out"

Of course he got me asked out to the Edgertons' tonight but I don't give a damn. I'm going! With him. I like him.

"You know perfectly well that he is better than the average would be in his position. He has everything, and besides, a clever girl can settle him down. Jennifer, if you would!"

"You mean if I could."

"You can"

"I will!"

No Foul Claim Can Be Made at Garden

Billy Ames, matchmaker at the Boston Garden, stepped to bat today and scored a kayo over possible fouls in boxing bouts.

All Garden boxing contracts now contain a clause which requires contestants to wear foul proof protectors. The boys must now fight it out to a decision or until one of them has been clicked on the chin with a kayo.

Al Mello, New England welterweight champion who defends his title against Lou Brouillard of Worcester on next Friday night, was the first to sign a "no foul" contract. Brouillard did likewise.

The "no foul" clause is also in the Maloney-Schaaf contracts. This bout takes place at the Garden on May 26.

Fouls have done more to injure boxing than anything else. The new move on the part of the Garden clears up this situation and should help restore confidence in boxing.

Mike Bonaglia, Italian heavyweight, and Andy Mitchell, Coast heavyweight, have been signed to meet in the semifinal to the Mello-Brouillard mill. Mitchell battled Maloney at the Garden.

Lud Abella and Billy Lynch will mingle in another bout on the Garden card.

Williams to Play Amherst Nine Today

Williamstown, May 8—For the first time in several years, Williams will be the favorite when it faces Amherst in its opening game of the Little Three series at Amherst today.

The Purple nine will face the Lord Jeffs with a clean slate thus far in the season, having chalked up four victories in a row. R. P. L. Clark, Middlebury and Vermont have fallen before Williams in the older named.

Bob Meusel Signs With Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Minn., May 8—Long Bob Meusel, for 10 years a major league baseball star as a member of the New York Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds, has signed with the Minneapolis club of the American Association.

GRID STAR ON GARDEN MAT PROGRAM

Wee Willie Davis, a mere infant of some six feet four inches and some odd 220 pounds, will try to ruin one Milo Steinbach in one of the preliminary bouts on Ray Fabiani's card at the Boston Garden on next Monday night.

Davis, like many former football stars, has gone in for wrestling. He did gridiron duty at West Virginia.

Al Pierotti, former Revere athlete will make his Hub bow as a wrestler when he takes on Jack Washburn of California.

Don DeLaun, French wrestler, will collide with Billy Bactash.

Pat O'Shocker has been dropped into the semifinal. He will oppose "Laddie" The Zbyszko-Garibaldi bout is out.

Hans Steinke and Tiny Roebuck will punch it out in the final. All they ask is a referee who will tend to other affairs than the rules of wrestling.

Ronkin Scores 11

Ed Ronkin, Maryland basketball star, counted 11 goals in four games for the old line lacrosse team.

Plans Made to Watch Delight

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Novels

"YOU won't leave me," said Mrs. Lorrimer, "We'll muddle through this somehow. There won't be another girl of that name—"

"No, she said she knew him—"

"I know. Go to bed, darling . . . leave it to my hands. . . ."

After Mary Lou had left her Margaret Lorrimer lay in the darkness and thought.

She didn't like the sound of this interloper.

But it had to be faced. She had to find out if Travers and this woman had been married. If they had, perhaps she could be bought off and Travers need never know. Yet, as far as Mary Lou was concerned that was no solution. She sighed and turned restlessly on her pillow. Her head began to ache furiously. She'd have to get some sleep, and be fit to see Dan and Larry in the morning. But before anything was done, she must see this woman herself. . . .

If she had not known before as a certainty, that Mary Lou was in love with Lorrimer, she knew it now. And now, more than ever, it complicated things, for them all.

In the morning, Mrs. Lorrimer sent for Doctor Mathews. Later, he and Larry Mitchel had a long talk. Then he came to Margaret.

"The boy's right. We will say nothing to Travers until this business is definitely settled. Until we are sure. And, Margaret, don't worry so!" he urged.

"Wouldn't you worry?" When Travers' whole future is at stake —his happiness . . . his health even . . ."

He's in excellent condition, thanks to . . . Mary Lou," the doctor reminded her.

"Yes, thanks to her. But what is to happen to her? And to Dan when he knows the truth? Oh, Dan, I'm frightened . . . terribly frightened. I think this is the dreadful mistake, the way through. Yet what could we do?" she asked, helplessly."

"Nothing. What are you going to do now?"

"Tom and I are going to the opening night of the revue," she told him. "Larry is to get us tickets. He's getting up some sort of an affair at the Wyndes', that night . . . so that Travers won't wonder why he and Mary Lou aren't included in our party . . ."

"I see." Mathews smiled. "And Larry's press agent job?"

Mrs. Lorrimer tried to laugh.

"He says that the opening night is up to the critics, not the press agents. Dan, I am going to see her and make sure, and—" She stopped— "Dan, how much is he going to ask us?" she asked.

In her talk with Larry Mitchell Mrs. Lorrimer applauded his wisdom in coming to her—and Mary Lou—with his news before doing anything else.

"I want to see this girl for myself," she told him, "and then I'll decide what to do. The question is how much claim has she? I have never believed," she said, "that Travers married her. It doesn't seem possible that no record has been kept of the marriage, even war times weren't as lax as that. Just what kind of a person is she, Larry?"

"I liked her," he said slowly. "She's pretty hard, of course. She has had bad times, one can see that. But somehow I feel she's a good sort. I had a legitimate claim, however. I can't imagine her not pressing it. By all practical standards she'd be a fool not to. And she's far from being a fool. Your position—" he floundered and stopped, a little red.

"You mean, money?" Mrs. Lorrimer laughed. "I see. You think it just what I thought, too. Well, I'll go to the first night of the revue and see her for myself, Larry. It's all a dreadful sort of muddle, yet I suppose it is better than uncertainty as to whether she was dead or alive," she added, "at least we have something concrete to face. Even if we find, as I believe and hope, that she is not Travers' wife, there are still complications."

Such as?" inquired Larry.

"Travers himself. If there was no marriage—and if there were not, why does he insist upon it—? there must at least have been some understanding, some relationship. I know my son. He would never capitulate to blackmail or an obligation," she said, her great eyes gravely fixed on Larry's and her dulcet, noble featured face quivering a little.

"I can imagine what she was like, ten years or more ago," Larry told her. "Very like, in some ways, Mary Lou. In others, not at all. Mrs. Lorrimer, please don't think me officious or impertinent, but it's Mary Lou that Travers cares for now. Not this strange woman. What's going to happen to him when he finds out? So can . . . just transfer his affections, can he? I mean this memory he loved took on flesh and blood. . . became Mary Lou . . . and when he learns—"

He stopped again. Mrs. Lorrimer tried to smile

"I know" she murmured, "that's what I am afraid of. When he learns the truth.

A Disease Rare in Humans

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

I HAVE a letter on my desk requesting information about a condition known as "the foot and mouth disease." Undoubtedly the inquirer has been misinformed about this ailment.

Though foot and mouth disease may infect man, it is primarily a disease of cattle. It is an acute and highly contagious disease, usually confined to cloven-footed animals.

The disease is characterized by an eruption of blisters on the lining of mouth and on the skin between the toes and above the hoof. It may sometimes involve the udder and other parts of the animal.

The condition is rarely seen in the United States. There was only one outbreak reported last year. Energetic measures taken by the Department of Agriculture quickly terminated this possible epidemic.

The disadvantages of the methods used are chiefly in the loss of cattle required in the checking of the disease. Infected cattle must be isolated and, when necessary, slaughtered and buried. All suspected cattle must be quarantined and kept under rigid supervision. These measures, though tedious and at times costly, are essential for complete eradication of the disease and the saving of other animals.

The infection is transmitted to man through the drinking of raw milk and buttermilk, or the eating of butter and cheese originating from infected animals. Children may become infected by the drinking of unboiled milk in a neighborhood where the disease is prevalent.

The disease may be prevented in man by extreme care in the selection of animals from which milk is taken. Pasteurization of milk in all suspected areas is the best means of preventing the disease. Children should not be allowed to drink unboiled milk.

What's in Fashion Today

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, May 8—Lovely, feminine neckwear certainly owns a multitude of skins this season. And it isn't only at the neck, either.

Neckwear is found around the wrists, the elbows, the upper arm, across the chest and down to the waistline.

Just why cuffs and gumpes and waistcoats and undersleeves should be called neckwear is a bit of a problem. It remains that they are and that they are all more fashionable this spring than in any season of our fashion memory

Most dresses have some kind of neckwear on them. If a dress hasn't, it's easy enough to put it on. Because there are collars made for almost any shape neckline—cuffs for any kind of sleeves—undersleeves or ruffling for short sleeves—and vestees and gulmpes to fill in V and sur-plice necklines.

And if what you want isn't already made up, it's simple enough to make it at home with laces, pleatings, ruchings and the other fashionable neckwear materials.

Tailored Pique

Pique is still the favorite material for tailored neckwear. But there's more of the softer, dressier type this season and most of it is made of finer materials.

Embroidered or eyelet batiste is a favorite. So are handkerchief linen, allover lace, net, georgette and chiffon.

FRILLY, LACY NECKWEAR FOR MILADY

Collars of made-up sets are the same shape as collars on fashionable dresses. They're round, V-shaped, long surplices, revers and fichus. Many of the newest ones are asymmetric—a hard way of saying they're cut different or deeper on ons side than on the other.

Deeper Cuffs

The newest cuffs are deeper. They're flared like gauntlets. Or they may be fitted close to the sleeve. But they tend to come higher up on the sleeve than they used to. Some, in fact, are so deep they're almost half sleeves.

Of course, regulation depth cuffs are fashionable, too. But if you want your dress to look newest, use the deeper ones

New Undersleeves

Undersleeves are something new this year. They're used with dresses that have three-quarter sleeves. And they certainly look smart, especially when they're made of rows and rows of narrow Val lace.

The old-fashioned gumpe is back. And we have little puff sleeves to come below the cap sleeve of a dress. Some are unduly sleeveless and are worn to fill in V-necks or under the jacket of a suit

Rows of lace, shirred nets and shirred chiffons are smartest in these And they're as feminine a anything can be.

To wear with the tailored suit, waistcoats of pique or linen also come under the classification of neckwear. And they're just about the only masculine looking piece of neckwear there is this season.

We've had sketched a number of the fashionable pieces of neckwear.

There's the fichu of lace, a tailored pique set, a lace-edged linen one with widely flared cuffs a shirred net gumpe and puffed undersleeves, another kind of fichu made of rows of Val lace with gauntlet cuffs, and the narrow ruching that so smartly outlines the surplice neckline.

Miss Fairfax Advises a Shy Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MRS. FAIRFAX:

What does one do to conquer bashfulness? Is there any cure? If so, I wish you would help me. Since I was a little girl I've known a boy three years older, who lives on a farm. Whenever any holidays come around, Mother and I go up there. This boy never pays any attention to me before. I suppose it was because we were both kids, but he does now that we're both grown up. I am going on seventeen. I go out with boys occasionally but, because of my shyness, I cant hold on to them even though I like some of them. The last time we went up to the farm this boy was there. I could not think of a thing to say and when he spoke to me. I got so nervous that I stammered and stuttered and got as red as a beet. I could not give a nice answer. Naturally, this made us both uncomfortable. For that I am older I know by the way he looked at me that he would like to know better and I, in turn, would be the happiest girl in the world if I could get over this shyness and win this boy's friendship.

Miss Fairfax, do you think that I will ever be able to overcome this dreadful bashfulness and shyness and be able to be lively and peppy and have good times? Won't you please try to help me?

BASHFUL.

Dear Bashful: You and all the other girls who write me similar letters, bewailing shyness and bashfulness, have an idea how really charming these two qualities are in this brassy age. I'd like to show you scores of letters written me by young men telling me that "shameless hussies" disgust them. And while I don't doubt the young men aided and abetted the "shameless" young ladies, they always claimed a self-righteous disgust later on. Would get over the adorable habit of blushing soon enough; time will attend to that. As for the young man on the farm where you both spend your holidays together, you seem to me to be making beautiful progress.

THE NO-YES GIRL

Today's True Story

THERE WAS a story in the papers about it—"Debutante daughter of wealthy parents to work in department store."

Doris laughed when she saw it and showed it to her mother.

"Don't you wish it were true," she said. "I mean that part about wealthy parents."

"I certainly do," replied Mrs. Benson.

No, the son of the owner of the department store didn't see her and fall in love with her because she was "different." He didn't marry her and repair her father's fortunes so that Mr. Benson could devote the rest of his days to nothing more than worrying about his golf score. Those things happen in books but they didn't happen to Doris.

What happened to her was that she got fired

To begin with, there wasn't any department store owner's son and even if there had been he would have married Doris only after Allen Harvey had been put in a strait-jacket. For he was sane. For two years Allen had been devoting nine-tenths of his waking hours to persuading Doris to marry him and he wouldn't have easily stopped aside. Hardly.

"What do you want to go to work for?" he asked Doris when he first heard of her job. "It would be a whole lot easier to marry me. After a while you'd get used to it."

"But all you do is ask me," answered Doris. "I'll never marry any man just for the asking."

"Cava man stuff, is that it?" asked Allen

"That's it," answered Doris.

"All right," said Allen, "I'll think about it."

He was still thinking about it and arguing with Doris when she lost her first job.

"Now you'll have to help me get another one," Doris told him.

"To tell you the truth," she added "that department store work wasn't so hot. We had a floorwalker there who used to throw a fit every time a customer had to wait two minutes. If they hadn't fired me I'd have crowned him with a frying pan. You know, they put me to selling kitchen things. What I don't know about them was a caution."

After three weeks Doris got another job. This one was in a book store and she lasted just ten days. Then she was told the store would have to struggle along without her

"I had no idea employers were so hard to get along with," she told Allen. "I thought I was doing pretty well. When a woman came in looking for a book for children I didn't try to sell her the Encyclopedia Brittanica. And, then, I like to read books myself. That job just suited me."

Doris' third job was as secretary to a consulting engineer. In this one she lasted for a month and then the engineer fired her by mail, enclosing a check for two weeks' pay and his regrets —sincere, perhaps, but firm

"Well," said Allen, "I know one job you can make a success of."

"What's that?" asked Doris

"Marrying me," replied Allen

But Doris didn't do it. She finally found a fourth job, only to have it go out from under her 10 days later. Two months passed before she found a fifth one, because jobs weren't easy to find. For every opening there were two or three hundred applicants, and most of them had the experience that Doris didn't have.

The fifth job ended Doris' patience She was fired at the end of the first day.

"All through, are you?" Allen asked her when she told him about it that evening "Well, how about it? You can always come back to the old job and take a partnership in it. You won't be fired from that. In fact, I'll let you run the business—within reason."

Doris wished she could say—Yes. She knew she loved Allen but she hated to see him win her so easily—just because she couldn't hold a job. If only he had done something more than merely asked her. If he had swept her off her feet or

As if in answer to her thoughts Allen spoke

"You'd better give in," he said. "Because this working for you is running me ragged. I've told so many lies that I'm ashamed to look in a mirror."

"What do you mean?" asked Doris. "What work did you do?"

"What work did I do?" replied Allen. "Why, as soon as you would get a job I'd go around and see your employer and tell him you were a wealthy society girl and that you were just working for the fun of it and that he ought to be ashamed of himself to give you work that some other girl really needed. I had a hard time with some of them, but they eventually listened to reason. Now, are you going to?"

She did

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Pajama Craze

NOW THAT women are wearing pajamas to dance in, they will probably soon be wearing them to swim in. Or to fly in.

There ought to be a system of traffic rules and "Stop Signals" all along the path of life for every woman.

* * *

Woman is always starting something but she never knows when or where to STOP! That is her weakness, particularly in matters of clothes and love. In her bright lexicon there is no such word as "moderation."

A man can be just a little bit good or a little bit bad; just a little bit foolish or a little bit intelligent; just a little bit in love and even just a little bit married

But, once a woman starts going she never puts on the brakes. Once she started out to get her "rights" and a few of man's privileges, she didn't stop until she got much more. And she is not satisfied until she has worked herself into a high fever over him and either strangled or stifled him with her devotion.

* * *

That is why it is foolish for a woman to imagine that, just by imitating man, she can beat him at his own game. She never will, until she learns when and where to STOP!

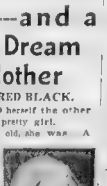
Truth—and a Child Dream of Mother

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE KILLED herself the other day, the poor, pretty girl.

Just 17 years old, she was A sweet girl



Winifred Black

gentle generous and affectionate—but very sensitive

She didn't kill herself because she was crossed in love or because she had failed in school or because she had some terrible accident which made her a hopeless cripple

She killed herself because she was ashamed of her mother

She lived with her father and her stepmother, the poor little girl who killed herself. Her father loved her devotedly, and her stepmother loved her, too, but the poor, pretty, little girl thought a great deal about her mother

She knew that her mother was alive somewhere, a beautiful mother, gay, young and charming.

A famous dancer, they told her, her mother was and she used to like to sit and dream about the day she would go to the theater and see some radiant creature with her arms full of flowers, come running down to the footlight to bow her thanks for a wild ovation

And she hugged the sweet dream close to her heart and then one day she learned the truth

Her mother had been a dancer but she was not a great star and never had been

She wasn't even a dancer when the poor, little, pretty girl found out the truth about her

She was just a poor wretch of a woman who trafficked in vice —a degraded, besmirched creature—murdered because she knew too much about the vice ring.

So the little girl couldn't bear to live any longer. And she killed herself and left behind her a diary of all her hopes and joyous ambitions

1 cup green asparagus

In a small saucepan, over low flame, melt the butter, add the flour and salt and mix well. Stir in liquor, return to fire, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. Then add the beaten egg yolks, cheese and the asparagus cut in small pieces (be sure it is well drained). Mix thoroughly, immediately pour into bowl and, after allowing to cool, fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Put this whipped mixture into a greased baking dish and bake in a slow oven for 15 minutes, then increase oven heat slightly and bake 25 minutes longer, or until none of the mixture clings to a knife after inserting. Serve in dish in which it has been baked, immediately upon taking from oven. Makes six portions. (This is an excellent way in which to use a bit of left-over asparagus.)

Mrs. A. T. Rynalski, 93 Upham st., Melrose.

PEANUT BUTTER ICING

Put 1 cup sugar, 3 tbsps. cold water, and 1 unbeaten white of egg in top of double boiler. Place over boiling water and beat with egg beater for 7 minutes. Remove from fire and add at once 2 heaping tbsps. peanut butter. Stir until peanut butter is thoroughly mixed with frosting and spread on cake. Gives a mellow flavor and appearance.—Mrs. John L. Robison, 128 South st., Foxboro.

Shortcake Is Now in Season

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WITH STRAWBERRIES more reasonable and of better quality than they were at this time a year ago, it's perhaps not too early to try out some of the strawberry recipes that I've been saving for you from last year. It does take quite a good many berries to make a real banquet Strawberry Shortcake and the recipe for that is yours on request, of course), but there are many other delicious ways of carrying the strawberry flavor through less expensively.

Martha Lee

Strawberry Jelly Tarts are delicious and eight big ones can be made with 1 quart of strawberries. Cut them in pieces, add ¾ cup sugar and let stand for one hour, in a warm room. Meanwhile soak 1 tbsp. of gelatine in ¼ cup cold water, stir and dissolve in ¼ cup boiling water until there are no gelatine granules left. Add this to the strawberry and sugar mixture and chill until ropey. Then pile in individual tart shells and let stand until firm. Serve with whipped cream.

STRAWBERRY RING

2 tbsps. gelatine
½ cup cold water
2 cups strawberries
½ cup sugar
1 tbsp. lemon juice
3 tbsps. confectioner's sugar
1 cup chopped apple
5 or 8 marshmallows, cut fine
½ cup English walnuts
1 pint cream

Soak the gelatine in cold water. Heat the strawberries and add to them the gelatine, sugar, and lemon juice Chill this mixture and when it begins to thicken add ½ pint of the cream beaten stiff. Mold in a ring mold. When ready to serve heat the remaining half pint of cream, add sugar, chopped apples, marshmallows, walnut meats broken fine, and pile lightly in center of the ring mold. Have all very cold.

SEES CARRIERS AS ESSENTIAL AS EVER

By FRANK H. MELOON

Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific, who has headed several railroads since he abandoned the telegrapher's key with which he began his career, does not agree with current Wall St. beau opinion. He thinks the railroads will "come back." He declares

"The railroads are not passe by any means. For the great majority of traffic they are just as essential as they have ever been."

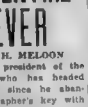
Mr. Gray's opinion is certainly important. He has long been an outstanding railroad leader, having been urged to accept the post of director-general of all American railroads back in 1918, when Mr. Wilson was quitting that post.

* * *

Recent railroad study in view of the advantages resulting in yesterday's report on the advisability of mergers in this section, has not revealed the existence of any belief that New England railroads are getting "passe."



Carl R. Gray

Mr. Gray is doubtless familiar with the New England railroad situation, although his home is far away. He was for years closely associated with the late Howard Elliott, in the Union Pacific executive personnel after leaving the leadership of the New Haven

Wrigley's adding to the uses of cotton by having its letters typed on stationery made from southern cotton bought with gum profit's will result in much more than a fractional consumption of cotton in old days for the same purpose. This was before new methods of papermaking came into being.

Years ago, when cotton sold considerably higher than at present, attempts to cultivate it in the North were made. Although tobacco is grown successfully in New England, the cotton plant did not prove commercially adaptable to our climate. As a result of the experiments, however, "wild cotton" still can be found in some localities. We saw some last summer in Stratford, Conn., I think. The boll is much smaller than that of cultivated cotton.

American Banker today says reports are current that George F. Baker is relaxing his activities in First National Bank as executor and trustee of his estate. Some trust men figure that the handling of the Baker estate should mean from $10 to $50 a share for the First National Bank. The latest stock holdings of George F. Baker are $109,000,000.

If the First National received the usual 2 per cent for handling the estate on this amount, it would be equal to over $2,000,000, or $20 per share on the 300,000 shares outstanding. Most estimates place the value of the estate at much higher than this figure. If it proves to be around $300,000,000, which is quite possible, it would mean $60 a share in fees for the First National.

'Anaconda Wire Has Increased Profit

'Peerless Motor in Red for Quarter

Cleveland, May 8 (AP)—Peerless Motor Car Corporation reported today a net loss of $114,221 for the quarter ended March 31, as against a net profit of $93,465 in the corresponding quarter of 1930

The bond market responded today more quickly than the stock market to the reduction of the rediscount rate of the New York Reserve Bank to 1½ per cent.

Can Rallies After Duplicating Low

American Can rallied today after duplicating its former 1931 low of 104⅝. Short interest in this issue is believed to be large, with its selling based on the idea of a large carryover of canned goods from last year.

Auto Stocks Led by Gen. Motors

Lists in the second hour today the automobile stocks attempted a move to higher levels, led by General Motors. This stock soon rose to above 42 for a gain of ⅜, while Chrysler sold in good volume at 26.

Canned Goods Sold in Great Volume

Are branch estimates on the canned goods carryover reliable? Many think not. They point to increasing sales through chain stores as a result of the drastic marking down of canned goods. Standard cans of evaporated milk sold at three for 20 cents are an outstanding example.

Columbia Gas Is Again Weak Spot

Columbia Gas was again the weakest spot in the utilities today, with a selling spell on fears of added dividend cuts.

U. S. Steel Off to a Fresh Low

To establish its new 1931 low today, U. S. Steel dipped over a point. Bethlehem also setting a new low with considerable regularity lately, but the selling is considered to have been largely professional in the past fortnight or so. Another seasonal reduction in unfilled tonnage is expected to be announced this week

Woolworth Again at High for Year

Woolworth was today the outstanding strong spot in the speculating and sold for the first time this year above 69. Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward, the other members of the merchandise group, at the same time were in good demand near the best prices of the day.

Short Covering in Royal Dutch

Considerable short covering has been in progress in Royal Dutch because of the premium demanded when the stock has been borrowed. Important traders who put out the stock are maintaining their short position stoutbornly on the theory that conditions in the oil industry all over the world and the earnings of Shell, just reported, make the outlook for Royal Dutch unusually bright, with omission of the dividend a probability

National Cash Register Gains

Although National Cash Register has been showing losses since the beginning of this year, it is said the monthly deficits have been growing smaller and the April figures are reported to have been much better than any month in the first quarter. In some quarters a good profit is being predicted for May, based on the progressive improvement which has been shown.

Canadian Pacific Cut Is Discussed

The reduction in the Canadian Pacific dividend from 62½ cents a quarter to 50 cents was no surprise to many in the financial district, who have been arguing that such a move was necessary before the end of the year. However, many were confident that the reduction would not be made until later on. The action is considered to reflect the views of the management regarding the future

Favorable Comment on Grand Union

Considerable favorable comment has been heard on Grand Union as a result of the earnings for the first quarter. In comparison with the decreases recorded by so many companies, the showing of Grand Union, with 46 cents a share compared with 42 cents in the same period of 1930, was highly satisfactory.

I. T. T. Nears Support Zone

Decline in International Telephone & Telegraph has carried the stock to a level where important long pull" buying developed on previous declines earlier in the year. The action of the stock, consequently will be watched closely today during the immediate future for a clue as to whether or not this buying again will manifest itself.

Coca-Cola Income Reported Higher

Earnings of Coca-Cola for the first quarter of this year are reported as having been higher than the corresponding period in 1930.

INSURANCE

Accident and Health Branch Necessary 2,000,000 Persons Disabled Each Year Family Protected in Case of Death Earning Power Safeguarded by Policy

By Frank F. Loomis

The accident and health branch of the insurance business is rapidly beginning to be appreciated by the public as an absolute necessity for personal protection as part of their insurance program

This, for the reason, that in case of either accident or illness, it protects the insured from loss of income, and men and women employed today value their incomes and earning power more than ever before.

Accidents strike without warning . . . illness overtakes' you when least expected

Your earning power is cut off as a result, income stopped, and you are plunged into debt with many unexpected and heavy medical expenses, doctor's and nurses.

Two million persons are disabled by accident each year, and women with foresight now insure against this hand of fate. Accident insurance protects your earning power, guarantees a monthly income check to meet your expenses. Health insurance does the same in case of illness.

Your family is protected, in case of your death, with life insurance, and perhaps you have prepared for an income for yourself upon retirement. You are paying yearly premiums on all this valuable and essential insurance protection, but if your earning power is stopped suddenly by accident or illness, will you be financially able to keep up this insurance protection, pay the premiums during the period of disability when you are receiving no income?

Accident and health insurance enables you to pay the premiums on all other lines of insurance, and is consequently a big factor in a man or woman's insurance program, and no one dependent on their earning power for a living can afford to be without this protection.

As an example, a man, age 35, can purchase an accident and health policy that will pay him $500 a month as long as he lives and is disabled and unable to attend to business duties, and house confinement is not necessarily required. For instance, a man may have a nervous breakdown, or develop a case of tuberculosis, and while still unable to attend to his business duties, he might be able to travel, play golf, etc., and the policy will continue the monthly payments.

There is no exception whatever in the nature of the illness or accident required to establish this claim, and the disability need not be permanent from the beginning, the contract is absolutely non-cancellable and the monthly income will be paid the insured by the company as often as the disability may occur, and for as long as it may exist.

If a man purchases such a policy with the clause inserted that no benefit will be paid for the first month, the premium would be reduced to approximately $37.50 a year, and with elimination period of only a month, the contract would cost about $312.50 a year.

GAIN FOR SHOE ORDERS NOTED

Shoe manufacturers report a gradual increase in orders, said Bradstreet's weekly summary of local trade conditions

"Building permits in Boston for April show an increase compared with March," it said, "74% perfect, estimated cost $2,860,707, having been issued in April, compared with 550 permits, estimated cost $1,644,000 in March.

"The wool market is still quiet but mills are showing a little more interest than earlier. Spot offerings although they are not ready as yet to make commitments, still remain high, while the undertone is certain few grades.

"Hides—leather markets are quiet, with but little buying interest. Upper leather markets are steady, but generally quiet. Prices on sole and upper leather continue to hold firm. Calf and patent leathers appear to be more favored among buyers.

"A gradual increase in shoe orders is reported by shoe manufacturers in the New England section. Retailers' stocks are reported as moving somewhat better. They appear to be some furnishings jobbers report a slight increase in volume of business during the past week, while manufacturers and jobbers are doing a good business at a very small margin of profit."

Quissett Mill declared a quarterly common dividend of $1 per share, placing the stock on a $4 annual dividend basis as against $5 formerly.

LIFE PAYMENT TOTAL BIG

Reports received from life insurance companies by the Weekly Underwriter and this Insurance Press indicate that a approximately 106,400 death claims for a total of $64,100,000 insurance were paid during the year 1930 on life policies that had been in force one year or less.

Reduced to daily averages, it will be seen that 291 first-year death claims for more than $175,000 were paid by the life insurance companies every day last year, or more than 2000 of these quickly maturing policies for approximately $1,230,000 were settled every week.

According to the reports, about 25,000 first-year claims were paid within three months from the time the insurance was written.

There were many cases in which death occurred only a day or two after the insured had taken out his policy, in a number of instances before the application could be written by the home office or the policy delivered. This illustrates the advisability of paying the full premium at the time of signing the application, in order to bind the contract

SHEET MILLS RAISE WAGES

New York, May 8—For the first time in two years, wages paid sheet and tin mill workers in a number of Youngstown mills will be higher in May and June as a result of the bi-monthly examination of sheet mills by representatives of the Manufacturers and Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers

Average selling price of sheets in March and April, used as a basis for wage scale in the mills during two months, was 2.86 cents a pound, or 15 per cent above the base and 1¼ per cent above the last sheet sale examination.

Bond Market Shows Fractional Gains

New York, May 8—The bond market responded to the reduction in the rediscount rates of the Federal Reserve banks by rising fractionally today.

Trading during the first hour, both on the New York Stock Exchange and in the over-the-counter market, was the most active of the day time, but the rate of turnover slackened thereafter.

Copeland Products Sales Increased

Mt. Clemens, Mich., May 8—Continuing its record of increase in business, Copeland Products, Inc., manufacturers of electric refrigerators, again showed a marked gain in 1931 over the like period of 1930. Unit shipments for April, 1931, were 48.19 per cent greater than for the same month in 1930.

Bond Offerings in Week Are Larger

New bond offerings during the week ended May 8 showed a sharp increase to $37,236,000 from $18,371,000 for the previous week, but are remained well under the $131,496,000 reported for the corresponding week last year.

Eaton Axle Shows Gain Every Month

New York, May 8 (AP)—Carlton M. Higbie, chairman of the finance committee of Eaton Axle & Spring Co., said the company has $2,140,000 in cash and marketable securities, has no bank loans and has made money every month this year.

SWIFT RALLY IS REGISTERED IN WALL ST.

New York, May 8—Another stampede of the Bears in Wall Street gave the stock market a swift upturn late in today's trading. Advances of $2 to $4 a share were numerous and trading became so feverish that the ticker fell a few minutes behind transactions.

Fluctuations had been constantly narrowing since the selling climax of last week, and traders felt that at this time for the market to break out of the rut, one way or the other.

CHAIN STORES HELP.

Recent bear efforts in U. S. Steel and American Can having failed, bulls tried to get a leverage in the chain store issues and met success. Woolworth was whirled up to another new high.

The market's first attitude toward the reduction in the federal reserve rediscount rate from 3 to 2½ per cent was one of indifference but it may have been a factor in making the bears nervous.

The list, surged, temporarily in the morning, U. S. Steel recording a new top at 109¾. It closed 3 points higher.

Miscellaneous issues gaining 2 to more than 5 points included American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Consolidated Gas, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, Hollander, Grand-Silver, Montgomery Ward, New Haven, Baltimore & Ohio, Radio, Gillette, Du Pont, International Telephone, American Smelting and Anaconda. Auburn shot up about 25.

Appearance of large block transactions in late trading helped sales to mount to a total of 2,700,000 shares.

CHAIN STORE STUDY

A tabulation showing aggregate dollar sales of 35 chain store systems for the first four months of the year showed a reduction of only 3 per cent from the like period of last year.

In view of the decline in prices, and the slackening of chain store expansion, this line of activity has held up better than several others. Mail order companies, however, make a less favorable showing, the aggregate for three companies showing a reduction of about 11½ per cent.

Complete report of building contracts let in the states east of the Rockies in April is more favorable than expected, however, and the earlier weeks of the month had indicated. The decline from last year is reduced to about 9 per cent.

Although the month usually sees a gain of about that extent over March, the fact that there was no gain over February was considerably larger than normal is a compensating factor.

Wall st. was not surprised that stocks failed to receive important stimulus from the lower rediscount rate, for it was recalled that several of the preceding reductions have been received with continued declines in prices.

There was a tendency in many quarters, however, to regard the move as constructive. As banks are almost clear of their debt to the Federal Reserve, however, the immediate effects may be slight.

Viewed in its international aspects, some bankers feel that a similar action by the Bank of France may be necessary to bring about the better distribution of credit sought in Europe.

Railway circles were intensely interested in the secret meeting of executives in Chicago, which, it has been widely rumored, was called to discuss the feasibility of an increase in freight rates to check the serious shrinkage in earnings.

HARVARD ROW OVER 'POISON PEN' LETTERS

opinion of the investigating authorities. Some of the letters were signed, "Three Harvard Men."

Some were received by society girls, warning them not to be seen with the instructor, because he was being investigated by the district attorney.

Others referred to alleged "carousals" in his rooms and referred to his friendship for a professor's daughter.

SIGNED BY "M. D."

Several of the letters were signed, "M. D." and indicated by the phraseology that a physician, and probably a physician of some standing in the university community, wrote them.

On the other hand, the young instructor is highly regarded by other members of the faculty.

The letters were turned over to the Middlesex County authorities and State Detective Edward P. O'Neil, it was learned, on orders of Dist. Atty. Warren L. Bishop, has been secretly investigating for two months in an attempt to discover the sender and to pin the guilt on him.

Two of the letters were received by Dist. Atty. Bishop and others by Prof. Joseph H. Beale, noted member of the law school staff.

Tarascouio himself received a number of letters, copies of which the readers dispatched to Dean Pound. The instructor also received numerous threatening telephone calls, including one late last night and one this forenoon.

Tarascouio's letter of defense was written to Prof. Calvert Magruder, vice-dean of the law school, and in it the aviator-empire-instructor tells of society balls and other events at which he had "encounters" with the other faculty members.

One of these affairs was the Russian ball, a gala society event, given during the past social season at 3 Beacon st. address.

On his enemy's desire to quaff vodka, the famous Russian beverage of potent intoxicating qualities, Tarascouio blames the start of the whole situation.

He vigorously denies anything wrong in his friendship with a certain professor's daughter, despite accusations of the poison pen writer.

The letters were all couched in excellent English, according to the investigating authorities, and were evidently written by a person or persons of education.

MESSIER OF NOBILITY

Tarascouio came to this country with other Russian emigres, members of the old nobility who were forced to flee after the revolution. He landed in San Francisco and went to work as a laborer in overalls to get a start.

He soon afterward came east and obtained a position in the law school library and studied in the Harvard Graduate School of Arts and Science, thereby winning a degree. Later he obtained the position as law school instructor.

His letter to Prof. Magruder paints a picture of the social life he saw thereafter in Cambridge and Boston.

After accusing another faculty member of being the poison pen writer, he continues:

"As to my acquaintance with the probable author of the letters, which brought about the present investigation, I met him at Professor ——'s daughter's house some time in 1928.

BLAMES VODKA.

"Having learned that I was a Russian and being fond of his knowledge of the Russian language, he mentioned vodka and asked if I indulged in it. With the knowledge that my brother had some, I took him to my house.

"Unfortunately, his conduct when under the influence of vodka did not prove up to my expectations.

"On three occasions I had to interfere and by kind and gentle manner also realized the embarrassment which his conduct was causing certain girls with his manifestly unwelcome advances toward certain ladies."

PROTECTED LADIES

"It is true I did not interfere by direct statement that his behavior was not of the kind I expected it to be, but by approaching the lady who at the moment happened to be in danger of his advances.

"It is my impression that these inferences did not remain unnoticed by him.

"To think I may add that on one occasion, while taking several lady guests home in my car, it was suggested that he was to be the first one dropped, which was not calculated to improve the situation.

"After another time at my home where his conduct was objectionable, I ceased to be interested in seeing him. Some time later Dean Beale called me into his office and told me of anonymous letters having been received from 'an M. D.'

"I realized the danger which I was confronting and by a process of elimination I came to the person in question. Going over past events, everything appeared to be explicable on that basis.

"At the opening of the Faculty Club he distinctly was unwilling to face me. Shortly after that, while I saw him at St. Clair's in Cambridge, I had the same impression.

CONFERS WITH PROBE'S.

"On February 27, at the Russian ball in Beacon st., Boston, he saw me with the same friends of mine whose embassy cannot be protected at the last party which I gave for my sister.

"On the following day about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, during my absence from home, an anonymous telephone call was taken by my brother, Ivan, said in effect:

"'Don't worry, we will fix Miss ——, also.' The name being that of the lady I escorted to the Russian ball the night before.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Seasoned fishermen are abandoning the trade, due to the fact that prices for fresh fish coming into the Fish Pier have been so prevailingly low.

This was admitted by officials at the Fish Pier and made public by the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Earnings of the fishermen of late have dropped to such a point that they have been forced to quit for other more lucrative work.

A Boston steam trawler was delayed in sailing three days because a crew could not be hired after the fishermen learned that the share of the crew on the previous trip was $2.50 each.

ADDITION TO FLEET

Boston is soon to have a new addition to its fishing fleet, in a new schooner to be named the Jorgina Silveira which will be launched at Essex, Mass., it was announced today. She is being built for Capt. Manuel Silveira. She will be 84 feet long and modern in every detail.

DEATH PROBE

Decision on the death of Ray Wilkins, 40, second assistant engineer on the tank steamer William Green, who was found dead in his bunk while the vessel was at St. Nicholas, Aruba, will be withheld by United States Inspector of Steam vessels before whom an investigation was held, until the arrival of the death certificate from Aruba. Capt. James Le Cain of the William Green was grilled by Capt. Charles M. Lyons and Inspector Charles F. Pritchard. Testimony indicated that the man died of heart disease. Wilkins was signed on at Boston on October 30. His home was at Jackson Heights, L. I.

ELECTRIC DRIVE

Smallest sea going craft with an electric drive, is the 35-foot yacht Madee now almost ready for the waves at Lawson's boatyard, Freeport st., Dorchester. Commodore Alexander W. Moffatt of Brookline, commodore of the Cruising Club of America, vice-commodore of the Boston Yacht Club, owns the new yacht.

HALIBUT FLEET

Two vessels of the Grand Banks halibut fleet, the Catherine with 50,000 pounds, and the L. A. Dunton with 16,000 pounds, came in with 27 arrivals that made up the Fish Pier fleet receipts of nearly three-quarters of a million pounds of groundfish. Mackerel came in by rail with 338 barrels arriving to supply the market.

Listening Post

WRITING FROM New York, Lowell (6:45) Thomas, L. D., asks the "colyum" to thank New England for the cordial reception and hospitality enjoyed by him during his very recent visit to this conservative territory. Such a request proves two things: First, our good friend is a regular fellow and second, his sense of values tells him the best way to reach most of the people. (Adv. Mgr. and retail stores please note.)

AT ANY RATE, his letter, is highly interesting and points out that much mail has come to him from these parts, since his return to Gotham. One of these communications, he says, takes him to task for mispronunciation of two words, Katahdin and Sagadahock. Furthermore, he challenges in flung his way, double daring him to turn loose on the air with words like Manchuria, Mississippi, Tombasbookaus and other lake names, better known in our neighboring states. Apparently enough, Lowell's heckler signs himself in the spirit of fun and fellowship—"A VIOLENT MAINE-IAC."

SOMETHING unusual in the way of news seems likely. John (WBZ) Holbrook spent a lot of time today joking at traveling bags.

NAMES IS NAMES: A popular NBC blues singer, Mimi Perkins, insists on riding, while out riding.

STAGE AND SCREEN powers-that-be think that "I Love You" are the three greatest words existing (songwriters too). But radio rahahs say at the overdone phrase, except with music. Few human voices are qualified to properly put it over.

* * *

THIS EAR AND THAT AIR (say it fast) police cars in Gotham are all equipped with receiving sets . . . Prosperity talks emphatically eclipsed by Unemployment discussions on the air . . . Highest price ever paid for radio performance went to Jascha Heifets . . . Boy, page Fritz Kreisler . . . Heilmut H. Hellmut, Teutonic Floyd Gibbons, radioed his farewell to America from the S. S. Europa yesterday . . . All humor to one side, Freeman Gosden (Amos) is a dramatic actor . . . "Saint Louis Blues" is still our idea of hotsy-totsy syncopation . . . it's 10 days old at that . . . Know what? . . . only this, time does not kill anything worth while . . . Daytime programs constantly changing . . . The Peanut Vender took my sugar to tea, but instead of walkin' my baby back home, there was no Wabash Moon and they were not running between the raindrops . . . She thought he was a great big man from the south, but I know he was Just a Gigolo . . . he left her crying, lover come back to me; it was pitiful to hear her sobbing I'm yours . . . But love is like that so why should I be blue again. I've got five dollars and believe me, 10 cents a dance is too much . . .

ANYWAY, all we ever say to a girl is "Hello Beautiful" or perhaps, "Would You Like to Take a Walk?"

LATEST PRETENDER to the throne of word king is Ross (who words a minute) Rowswell, who comes to the Sunshine program, WNAC at 6 tonight with an eye to the Gibbons' crown. Well, if Rowswell can't usurp Floyd from his place in the sun, his next best bet might be to hire himself out as a long distance telephoner. Rosey could save folks plenty $ by getting a six-minute message over in three minutes.

They stood motionless and silent in her presence. Without a murmur of dissent did the late President Harding, Jascha Heifetz, Charlie Chaplin and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Berlin obey her slightest command. And tonight from WBZA at 10 Nayas McMein, eminent artist, will tell about these notables when they sat for her paintings.

CONTEST: On what programs do these phrases originate . . . "accent mark over the final E" . . . "sign of the spectrum" . . . "are KIND to" . . . "speaking and directing the musical part of the" . . . "yours very truly."

* * *

A short time ago we suggested an organ duet would be a novelty on the air. That thought has been carried out, only on a larger scale. An organ quartet will be heard from WJAR at 4 tomorrow playing hitherto unexplored fields in symphonic effects and nuances of tone shading will be subject to the quest . . . Were Amos to b'dcast without Andy we wouldn't be more surprised than to learn Julia Sanderson is going to be on the air without Frank Crumit. Yet from WBZA at 8 tonight Julia forsakes her career for a guest artist tour . . . From a clothing clerkship to become one of America's foremost motion picture directors is the story of Ernst Lubitsch. And from his directorship he is becoming a radio guest artist. Over WEEI at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow he will demonstrate the pleasure he derives from untutored piano playing.

Personalities

WILLIAM HARD, b'deaster of "Back of the News in Washington," receives more fan mail then any other NBC speaker . . . Capt. TAYLOR BRANSON, who leads the U. S. Marine band, is an accomplished singer . . . ELINOR SMITH, aviation announcer for NBC, has beautiful solo flying since she was 15 yrs. old. Between the ages of 15 and 16 she experienced eight crack-ups and 10 forced landings . . . The most exclusive club among radio amateurs is the WAC Club, and consists of 570 members from all over the world. Requirement for membership in the WAC club (Worked All Continents) is proof that the applicant has accomplished direct two-way communication between his station and stations in each of the six continents. Time will come when WAC will be obsolete; Mars club will be The Thing . . . When TED HUSING b'dcasts a golf match, he carries portable radio transmitting station 10-KAC around on his back . . . HOWARD SMITH, WGAR, CBS b'dcaster, is writing a book on mental alertness. Example of what association with radio's studios does . . . His Royal Highness, the DUKE OF YORK, is an expert radio ad-libber . . . Two excellent sound effects used in WNAC studios: fly swatters rotated by an electric motor and a windstorm, and a newspaper against a dramatic fan makes a marvelous airplane.—M. G. M.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN LARGEST NEW ENGLAND EVENING CIRCULATION

FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1931

The Railroad Report

American's Stand Approved by Committee

The 284-page report of the New England Railroad Committee can be reduced to a few sentences.

Pennsylvania Railroad control of the Boston & Maine and the New Haven should be broken, by friendly, peaceable means if possible.

If not, resort should be made to every legal means available.

We of New England should own and operate our own railroads.

We know New England best. We understand our own problems. We are more interested in our own welfare than any alien trunk-line could naturally or logically be supposed to be.

We should not be used as mere pawns in this struggle among the trunk-lines for national railroad supremacy.

New England has plenty of liquid money available to own the securities in our own railroads.

Once we own our roads and dominate them completely, the trunk-lines can be invited to supply us with service, not on their terms but on the terms we decide to be most advantageous to our own welfare.

We shall then be proud, independent New England, capable of mastering our own destiny. We shall not be a province or dependency of Wall Street and Broad Street, interested in their own problems first and in ours only to the extent that it would help their major aims.

The Boston Evening American believes this report, made after an exhaustive inquiry lasting eighteen months, to be a good report because it corroborates and verifies the attitude of the Boston Evening American and the counsel it has given the people of New England consistently over a long period.

Former Governor Spaulding, the chairman, and the other members of the New England Committee should receive the unstinted commendation of the people of New England.

Historic Portsmouth

The people of Portsmouth, N. H., can be relied upon to overcome the serious damage visited by the fire upon their historic seaport city. Stamina in adversity is their heritage.

Portsmouth is rich in antiquity.

There may be seen the famous homes in which Washington and Lafayette were entertained, and where John Paul Jones lived while supervising construction of the first American sloop-of-war. The lightning rod, which Benjamin Franklin fashioned upon the Warner mansion, still stands. The house in which Daniel Webster first practiced law defies the march of time.

Some of the finest Bulfinch Colonial architecture is in a wonderful state of preservation. There is the scene of the first overt act against Great Britain. The Colonial patriots raided Fort William and Mary, seized the cannon and munitions, hauled it over the road to Boston and turned it upon the redcoats at Bunker Hill.

Happily none of these ancient shrines was damaged. It would pay us well to visit them occasionally and drink in some of their inspiration when our head-servants at Washington are about to betray nationalism in favor of some international fandango like the League of Nations Court.

State Should Repay

The Nonantum Civic Association has adopted resolutions thanking the Boston Evening American for its interest in the welfare of the humble depositors of the five closed banks likely to suffer severely from the peculation of their funds by the missing receiver, appointed by the State.

The association included this significant statement in its resolutions:

"There is only one thing that will now prove to these poor working people that they are living in a country where liberty and the honest administration of justice prevails, and that would be the return to them of what they have lost through the dereliction of public officials."

The people are exactly right. No resident or citizen of Massachusetts should be made to suffer the loss of a 10-cent piece through the dishonesty of a State official. They should be reimbursed to the last penny.

They should take their petition to Governor Ely. His sense of justice ought to weigh heavily in their favor.

The Higher Learning

To settle an argument over Freud, two Columbia University savants cast off their inhibitions and resorted to fisticuffs. Neither got hurt, though a third savant who stepped between was rather badly damaged. All that effort ended in nothing but a discolored eye for a non-Freudian.

The tumult had hardly died down when a dispatch from Chicago announced that Professor Morse, famed head of the University of Minnesota's history department, had been trimmed for $100 by two strangers at the old coin game. He matched pennies with an affable person whose penny had two heads and no tail.

The Higher Education is wonderful. But what universities need is a Chair of Worldly Wisdom. Anything to reconcile erudition with horse sense.

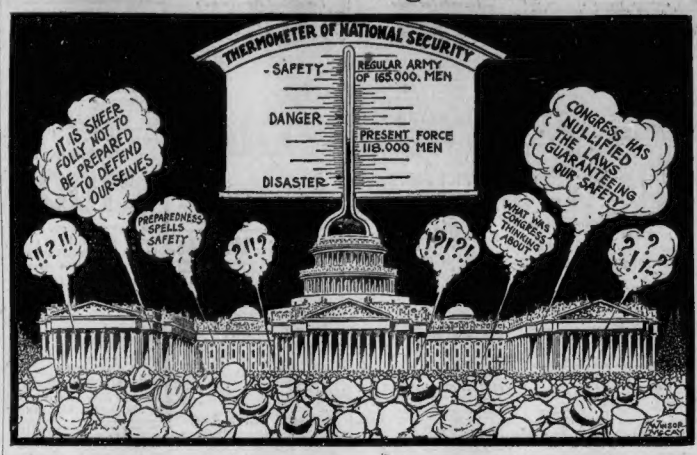
What Price Faith?

Education is thought of by many as being just a formal school process. Yet, what lesson may the children of Vineland, New Jersey, learn in class that will influence them so much as the deed of their town elder, Colonel Kimball, a banker?

A bank with which he had nothing to do failed in the same town, so to repair the faith of 5000 children in banking, and in the honor that should exist amongst men, he made good their thrift deposits, which had been impounded.

The pledge amounted to $37,606. Five thousand children were morally influenced by the good deed, and it will remain in their thoughts long after many sermons they are yet to hear will have been forgotten.

Below the Danger Line



In his address of welcome to the Sixth Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce, President Hoover appealed to the business leaders of the world to insist upon the limitation and reduction of land armaments.

In urging them to support the conference on land armaments, to be held in Geneva next year, Mr. Hoover said he knew of no proposal for the economic rehabilitation of the world so necessary or so important as the success of that conference.

There is an excellent reason, however, why the United States should keep out of that conference, and this reason Mr. Hoover gave when he said:

"The United States has a less direct interest in land armament reduction than any of the large nations, because our forces have been already demobilized and reduced more than all others."

This is an understatement of the real situation. It falls far short of the actual facts about our land forces.

Instead of maintaining these forces at the minimum strength fixed by law as essential to our national security, Congress has allowed them to FALL FAR BELOW THE DANGER LINE.

Instead of a regular army of 165,000 men, we have one today of only 118,000—a force entirely inadequate to perform the peace-time missions allotted to it.

Without any treaty for the limitation of land armaments, we have nullified our own law providing for their maintenance.

With a treaty for the limitation of naval armaments, we have ignored the obligation it imposes to build the ships for which it provides.

Thus, the failure of the United States to build its navy up to treaty strength and its regular army up to the minimum fixed by the National Defense Act is a warning to other nations of our own folly, instead of an example of our peaceful purposes.

Listen, World! Thinking

By ELSIE ROBINSON

All People Think About the Same Things

PEOPLE THINK.

All people think.

All people think about the same things.

Elsie Robinson

Which statements are going to come as a rude shock to certain snooty citizens who think they have a corner on intellectual processes. I know—I was just such a snooty citizen myself.

When I began this work I thought I was different. I was old enough to know better and I'd had plenty of enlightening hard knocks, but I still labored under the delusions that God had made me on a special mold. I thought I saw beauty and felt ugliness where common people did not see or feel them. I thought that I, alone, was puzzled by the mystery of life. Well, maybe a few other Choice Souls like Socrates and King Solomon and Bernard Shaw had noticed it. But privately I was convinced that, in certain matters, I had the bulge on even them. So naturally I was all prepared to Write Down to the proletariat in easy, one-syllable words and ideas, suited to their feeble comprehension.

Well—I started. And, stranger, what a surprise was handed to me!

For the first thing that happens to you in a job like this is about a million letters. Real letters from real people in every circumstance. I was prepared for the letters. I had expected that most of them would be written on cheap paper, badly worded. They were. I had also expected that most of the writers would rant about the Home Folks, rave about their Sweeties, spill the beans on their neighbors and probably ask me a cure for warts. They did. But they also did something else . . . an astonishing, humbling something else—

There—tangled with the common words, the foolish fatheaded ideas—were THOUGHTS. Thoughts that I had thought were the select and special secret of my own soul. Wistful, lovely thoughts written on paper smeared with tenement house grease. Brave, generous thoughts, signed with a number—from some prison cell. Great Truths, searching questions, jotted down by some "hindle stiff," resting in a hobo jungle. The hands that had written those thoughts were bony with hunger, reeking with cheap, desperate perfume, once—at least—stiff with human blood. But the thoughts that struggled to find expression under those hands knew no limitation of pain or poverty, ignorance or shame. They were the old, old cry of the human soul—reaching toward the Eternal Mystery. They were your thoughts and my thoughts —the thoughts of Lincoln watching, helpless, through the night—of Joan, burning at the stake—of Christ, hanging on the cross.

Ignorance, poverty, social injustice and the mischance of birth had stunted those bodies and warped those brains so that they could not translate thought into normal action. They could dream of beauty and truth and courage and decency, but they could not live them. But their dream was the same as my dream—as your dream—

So I who had come to condescend, perhaps to scoff, remained to marvel. I no longer think I'm different from the Common Herd. I only hope, humbly, that I'm the same.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, May 8.—Thoughts while strolling: Rosy-cheeked young Irish cops with the breath of Killarney in their voices. A. N. Aylesworth and WellingtonCross look alike. The versatile Jay Jerome Williams—the Edwin Alger of the comic strips and radio, syndicate manager and lecturer.

Dr. Abraham Flexner, a Louisville, Ky., boy, who made good in the city. Bill Lengel, who peacemakered the Dreiser-Lewis bout. A turbaned Hindu in a rumble seat. Theodor, former head waiter, now directing Ritz Towers. And friend of Molnar and Oppenheim. Shining modernistic fronts on West 34th st.

Julius Tannen looks the same as he did 20 years ago. And he has a grown son. A pineapple drink shop features a Hawaiian guitarist. Dudley Field Malone's pink complexion. Nothing can look so bedraggled as a soiled white poodle. Never hear of "pink eye" anymore.

The late and beloved Nick Longworth has a double floor-walking on the avenue. A chalk-faced lady in black wearing a red rose. Every small town has a Lige but you never meet anyone by that name in New York. Nor anyone called Clint. Or Ab. They are all Als and Daves.

Who remembers when Martin's demanded strictly formal dress? And flopped. And gray derbies with black eyelets in the crown? No one, by the way, is carrying on with a gray derby since Raymond Hitchcock left us. Save Tommy Millard, and he's in far away Shanghai.

Fur store proprietors who stand out front. Spanish dentists. Red nosed, raggedy wrecks hunting cigar snipes. I've always wanted to have one barbered, bathed and outfit him in the latest fashion. Take him to the Ritz to dinner. And write a magazine piece on his resurrection.

The front of the Hippodrome looks like a circus side show. I first saw Annette Kellerman there. And where is she? "Apartment For Rent" signs where you never saw them before. Ned Wayburn moves like electricity. What became of Make-Men Tablets? And Liquozone?

The passing of Dr. George A. Dorsey a few weeks ago removed not only a celebrated anthropologist and author, but the most beloved poker player New York's literati has ever known. To the gang around the green baize table he was "Doc," fervently free from guile and an apple-cheeked gentleman with the disarming smile of a green grocer. He was the highest of high browns and yet as though a trifle ashamed of his intellectual depths he resorted to such ungrammatical nuances as "I seen" and "I done." I once heard him drop his cards to a caller with: "I knowed you had 'em." He was passionately devoted to his scientific studies, a fellow of a score of this and that societies, but among those privileged to his friendship he was just: "Doc, a grand guy."

The Indian relic craze has attained a fresh furore. Three shops now specialize in such antiques. Genuine Indian relics, like the fashioners thereof, are vanishing. In 20 years they will attain a great value. In the meantime many that pass for the real thing are being turned out in a small Jersey town.

A lady in Washington, who, I presume, thinks my soul needs a bit of tidying up, writes in a robust fashion while boarding school hand: "Give me a well cooked and served meal, a bouquet and a sunset and I can do more for a man's soul than all the cant ever preached." All of which, if true, is a good one on the cant preachers.

Somehow I always feel as though I'd like to take a running, youthful jump over a bonfire after passing DeWolf Hopper or James J. Corbett on the street. They are generally on their way to the Lambs around noon day. Hopper, past 70, is straight as an arrow. And Gentlemen Jim, in his 60's, suggests a lithe runner awaiting the crack of the pistol. As Walter Catlett once cracked: A couple of gland gents."

From a news item: "Mrs. —— has been depressed about her jewels. Once she wore the finest, but lately others have outshone her."

An elegant year for jewel worrying!

Capital Silhouettes

WE COMMEND to the prosperity seekers the example of young Bryan Untiedt, who did not wait for the conference of the International Chamber of Commerce, but went home and put on a pair of overalls.

AS FOR the efforts of the Government to prevent playful airplane pilots from trying to fly in formation with terrorized geese, it must be remembered that birds of a feather flock together.

THE GENTLEMEN of the International Chamber of Commerce, who came to the United States to talk about debts, have discovered that they landed feet first in the midst of a lot of people who have become experts on that subject since the big crash.

Finest Sight in the World

Here It Is

A MOTHER AND HER BABY. NO GREATER HAPPINESS THAN THIS

Young women ask, "Shall I get married and have children or shall I have a 'career'?"

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred when they try for a career they don't GET it, unless you call "a career" a typewriter or answering a bell from an outside office.

If they have a career—on the stage, in literature, art or business—it is usually unsatisfactory at best; always leaves a feeling of emptiness and sadness, unless there are children.

And if there are children, as there should be, the career interferes with their care. A child does not need SOME of its mother's time and affection. It needs ALL of both, plus her most intense devotion.

Every young woman should look forward to her only real career, as illustrated in the picture above—the career of MOTHERHOOD.

The picture presents an extremely fine little baby and happiness in the mother's face. Do you think any other "career" could bring such happiness as this? It might bring satisfied vanity. Footlights are brilliant; applause is intoxicating; success, even in dull business, probably has its reward in self-approval.

Balboa looking on the Pacific, Columbus touching land, Newton realizing that mathematical calculations had proved the soundness of his law of gravitation, Nero crowning the King of Armenia, crouching at his feet, Tunney knocking Dempsey out of the championship, never knew such happiness as fills the heart and mind of this mother.

Young ladies, GET MARRIED. There is always a young man within reach. Select him carefully. Remember that first among important qualities comes INTELLIGENCE. Your children are entitled to an intelligent father.

Next comes KINDNESS, for kindness is to married life what sunshine is to flowers.

Third comes CONCENTRATION, capacity for hard work, which should go with real intelligence.

But, whatever you do and whatever you choose, GET MARRIED.

Don't argue the question, "Can two live as cheaply as one?" Perhaps they can't, but one cannot eat as cheaply as he can starve. Nevertheless, he eats.

Single life starves the soul or undermines moral character. You don't want to do either.

Men propose when the time comes, but women pick out their husband before the gentleman knows anything about it, and they manage the whole affair. It is usually all settled before the proposal, although the man does not know it.

Young women, get married and KNOW the happiness that you see in this mother's face.

It is the only happiness worth while for women; all the rest is hollow.

At Last, a Postoffice

After the loss of three years of wrangling, we are to have a new postoffice.

Out of the garish hole in Postoffice Square, a marker to needless delay and political indecision, will emerge at some time or other a modern 21-story structure, to be built largely of New England granite rather than of Indiana limestone.

There never should have been any disagreement over the material to be used. New England granite is durable. It is the cheapest investment in the long run. It is on the scene. It is associated in popular imagination with the history of New England.

To the obstinacy and political manipulations of the Indiana limestone bloc in Congress, the business interests and people generally of New England can attribute the handicapped postal service they have suffered.

Anyway, we are to have a fine building with up-to-date facilities. It IS to be of New England granite. In the contemplation of this fine victory we probably can afford to forget the past. But New England has learned again that she cannot expect her rights to be handed her from Washington on a silver platter. She will always have to fight for them.
